

This is a digital copy of a book that was preserved for generations on library shelves before it was carefully scanned by Google as part of a project to make the world's books discoverable online.

It has survived long enough for the copyright to expire and the book to enter the public domain. A public domain book is one that was never subject to copyright or whose legal copyright term has expired. Whether a book is in the public domain may vary country to country. Public domain books are our gateways to the past, representing a wealth of history, culture and knowledge that's often difficult to discover.

Marks, notations and other marginalia present in the original volume will appear in this file - a reminder of this book's long journey from the publisher to a library and finally to you.

Usage guidelines

Google is proud to partner with libraries to digitize public domain materials and make them widely accessible. Public domain books belong to the public and we are merely their custodians. Nevertheless, this work is expensive, so in order to keep providing this resource, we have taken steps to prevent abuse by commercial parties, including placing technical restrictions on automated querying.

We also ask that you:

- + Make non-commercial use of the files We designed Google Book Search for use by individuals, and we request that you use these files for personal, non-commercial purposes.
- + Refrain from automated querying Do not send automated queries of any sort to Google's system: If you are conducting research on machine translation, optical character recognition or other areas where access to a large amount of text is helpful, please contact us. We encourage the use of public domain materials for these purposes and may be able to help.
- + Maintain attribution The Google "watermark" you see on each file is essential for informing people about this project and helping them find additional materials through Google Book Search. Please do not remove it.
- + Keep it legal Whatever your use, remember that you are responsible for ensuring that what you are doing is legal. Do not assume that just because we believe a book is in the public domain for users in the United States, that the work is also in the public domain for users in other countries. Whether a book is still in copyright varies from country to country, and we can't offer guidance on whether any specific use of any specific book is allowed. Please do not assume that a book's appearance in Google Book Search means it can be used in any manner anywhere in the world. Copyright infringement liability can be quite severe.

About Google Book Search

Google's mission is to organize the world's information and to make it universally accessible and useful. Google Book Search helps readers discover the world's books while helping authors and publishers reach new audiences. Explanation

This list is part 9 of a Classified Catalogue of all books in the Library, July 1, 1902, and includes the books in the class Biography.

The Decimal classification has been used in this section as in others, but the Individual biography has been arranged alphabetically by subject, and 92 has been used for the class number.

Entries to parts of books are not included, but such entries will be found in the card catalogue at the Central Library, which should be consulted by anyone desiring to see the entire resources of the Library on any given subject.

The symbol at the right-hand side of the page, opposite each title, is the number to be used in calling for the book, and should be copied exactly. If the work is in more than one volume, the volume wanted should be specified. Call numbers preceded by the letter "r" designate books in the reference collection, which cannot be taken from the Library. These books, as well as others in the Library, may be consulted freely in the Reference room. The letter "j" prefixed to a call number indicates that the book is a juvenile.

Part 10 of the catalogue will consist of the author and subject indexes, title-pages and preface to the completed work, which forms in three volumes a first series. A second series, in two similar volumes, is in type and will be issued as soon as the printing can be completed, bringing the catalogue down to January 1907.

The parts issued, up to this time, with their postpaid prices are as follows:

- Part 1, General works, 10 cents.
- " 2, Philosophy and Religion, 15 cents.
- " 3, Sociology and Philology, 25 cents.
- " 4, Natural science and Useful arts, 50 cents.
- " 5, Fine arts, 25 cents.
- " 6, Literature (except fiction), 25 cents.
- " 7, Fiction, 40 cents.
- " 8, History and Travel, 65 cents.
- " 9, Biography, 30 cents.

"This writer, one of the most celebrated of antiquity, lived in the first century of our era. The work that has immortalized his name, and made him a favorite with wise men and promising youth, is the lives of forty-six Greeks and Romans. These lives he wrote in pairs, portraying one Greek and one Roman, and then drawing a comparison between them...Among the most delightful sketches ever written. As an ultimate and conclusive authority they cannot be accepted. But they are able to inspire, to charm, and to instruct. They take the reader into the heroic stir of Roman and Grecian life." *C. K. SMALLEY, George Washburn.

London letters and some others. 2v. 1891.....920 S631

Author was London correspondent of the "New York tribune."

"Nearly the whole of the first volume [is filled] with notices of eminent personages whom he has met—commencing...with Prince Bismarck and Count Herbert Bismarck, the German Emperor, Léon Gambetta, Louis Blanc, Lord Beaconsfield, and others of similarly varied distinction—and ending with Browning, Lord Lytton, Renan, Gustave Doré, Carlo Pellegrini the caricaturist, and Mr. Watts the painter... About a hundred pages are devoted to two of Mr. Gladstone's 'Midlothian Campaigns,' and to a discussion of his politics. 'Notes on Social Life,' including an elaborate description of the ways of London society...sketches of 'English Talk and Talkers,' and 'The American Girl in England,' are followed by 'Notes on Parliament,' and descriptions of various 'Pageants' (a 'Royal Review,' the Queen's Jubilee, the opening of the 'People's Palace,' etc.) which the author has witnessed; and the whole concludes with miscellaneous sketches, all more or less entertaining." Critic, 1890.

"Might have been called 'A Group of Perfect Worldlings.' It consists of an Introduction and studies of nine men...who devoted themselves, 'with that perfect consistency which marks only the greatest men,' to the unique cultivation of themselves...We need hardly say that, coming from Mr. Whibley, the analysis of the lives of those splendid worldlings is unmoral. They are his choice. In his ironical, detached way he sympathizes with them, but that is his affair. We are only concerned to say that he has done his work with art, with humour, and with a cheerful spirit." Academy, 1900.

 Falklands. 1897.....923 L84
 Throws a strong side-light on the period of the Romanist revival in England under James I and Charles I. The first Viscount Falkland was lord deputy in Ireland and played a part by no means insignificant in the history of his time. His son, an ardent royalist, was a scholar, philosopher and poet. The charm and value of the book lie in its treatment of what might be considered unimportant details. While not a great contribution to historical literature, the volume brings together, in convenient and attractive form, much that has hitherto been scattered and more or less inaccessible.

Contents: The middle ages.—The 16th century.—Henri IV.—Louis XIII and Richelieu.—Mazarin.—The reign of Louis XIV.—The reign of Louis XV.—Louis XVI and Marie Antoinette.—The revolution.
 "Anecdotes and personal incidents...arranged for the most part chronologically, but without regard to historical proportion or perspective. The chief fault of the book...lies in the incorrect estimates of men and deeds given by anecdotes chosen with reference to their dramatic interest." Nation, 1896.

 Romance of the house of Savoy, 1003–1519. 2v. 1898....923.1 W68
 The history of the present royal family of Italy is full of romantic incidents, and the author has dealt chiefly with these, enlarging on those personages who, by the picturesqueness of their lives, appeal most to the imagination. She tells many interesting anecdotes and altogether much more of the personal experiences than of the political lives of her characters. There is an introductory chapter giving a concise history of the family from the earliest times to the present day. Illustrated with portraits, views of historic buildings, etc.

"Author writes from the point of view of the political historian, as well as of the general observer and man of letters. Washington, Adams, Jefferson and Madison could have been but shadowy personalities. With the later presidents he was, however, more familiar. His opportunities brought him in contact with many of our noted men, and he was present on occasions of national importance which he is able to describe with the enthusiasm of an eye-witness." Current literature.

 "The defects of the work are nearly allied to its merits. They are to be found chiefly in the strong partialities and animosities of the author; and, while these characteristics impart spirit to his pages, they detract very considerably from their real value. Lord Campbell was an energetic hater, and he never hesitated to give expression to his animosities. The value of his writings, therefore, is in the general impressions and the entertainment they afford, rather than in the correctness of the information they give." C. K. Adams.

Great captains; lectures showing the influence on the art of war of Alexander, Hannibal, Cæsar, Gustavus Adolphus, Frederick and Napoleon. 1892.923.5 D67
 "Of course, the limits of a single lecture make the treatment of the career of each of the six 'great captains' a mere sketch; but the sketch is given with a freedom of drawing and an eye to perspective which produce a pleasing and vivid picture. The...purpose... has been to show that great warriors have been great in proportion as they have possessed that high form of practical intellect which has enabled them to make a science of their work." Nation.

Contents: Kincaid's "Adventures in the rifle brigade."—"Rifleman Harris."—Anton's "Military life."—Mercer's "Waterloo."
 "History of Wellington's most famous campaigns as told...by the actual fighters...The four autobiographies selected may be familiar to the military student, but are practically inaccessible to the general reader, being old and rare...These narratives present...inside views, and a glimpse of the spirit and feelings of the army not then available through the medium of the press...It must, however, be remembered that the regimental officer or man...can only describe what took place on a very limited area, and that discrepancies between the accounts of two brother officers, standing within a few yards of each other, concerning even regimental operations, are not uncommon."

 Les artistes français à l'étranger. 1876.....q927 D95
 Aim of the author is to bring to light the names and the works of French artists, since the 13th century, who have painted in foreign countries. Artists are grouped under the different countries, and the names of the persons for whom they painted, or the places where their works are exhibited, are given. Preceded by a short history of French art.

v.6 is a commentary by J. P. Richter.

"These biographies...are the groundwork of our knowledge of the great Italian artists of the XV. and XVI. centuries...[The book] is extremely interesting, full of anecdote and picturesque narrative, and gives brilliant pictures of life in Italy during the epoch. The author's statements of fact have often been found erroneous, and are frequently corrected in the notes of this translation." Russell Sturgis.

 Some players; personal sketches. 1899.....927.9 B79
 Reprinted from the "Chicago daily news."
 Sketches of most of the well-known actors, actresses and opera singers of the day, full of anecdote and gossip. The following quotation is a fair sample of the author's style: "Her voice was soft as chartreuse and had a glisten in it like the shine upon pearls...Youth hung all about her as an infant clings to its mother's skirts. It flecked her strange eyes with depths aglow in brown topaz...She is as yearless as the stars." Many photographic illustrations and facsimile letters.

Maclise portrait gallery of illustrious literary characters, with memoirs. 1898.....928 B31
This admirable series of 81 portraits and groups, mostly full length sketches, originally published in "Fraser's magazine," preserves the familiar aspect of many men still famous, and of others who played a great part 60 years ago, though they are now comparatively forgotten. Of these drawings Dante Gabriel Rossetti says: "I suppose no such series of the portraits of celebrated persons of any epoch, produced by an eye and hand of so much insight and power, and realized with such a view to the actual impression of the sitter exists anywhere, and the period illustrated possessed abundant claims to a worthy personal record. Pre-eminent here, among literary celebrities, are Goethe, Walter Scott, Coleridge, Wordsworth, Charles Lamb and Thomas Carlyle. Each produces the impression of absolute trustworthiness as in a photograph."

Letters of Abelard & Héloïse, with a particular account of their lives and misfortunes by John Hughes. 1806.....92 A116

First English translation. Contains besides the five letters of Abailard and Héloïse, one from Abailard to Philintus, a friend, also poems by Pope and Mrs Madan.

Lettres; tr. par E. Oddoul, précédées d'un essai historique par M. et Mme Guizot. 1839.....qr92 A116
 Illustrated by J. Gigoux.

Love letters of Abelard and Héloïse. 1901. (Temple classics.)92 A116l

The love story of the illustrious Abailard and Héloïse is told in these six letters, which were written in Latin about the year 1128, 10 years after the lovers had separated, Abailard to become a monk and Héloïse a nun. Though both were famous in their day, Abailard as a philosopher and logician, Héloïse for her learning, it is by these incomparable letters alone that they live to-day.

ABAILARD, Pierre.

McCabe, Joseph. Peter Abélard. 1901.....92 A116m

"It is less with the tragic romance with which Abélard's name is principally associated than with the career of the philosopher, the theologian, and the ascetic that Mr. McCabe is concerned." Academy, 1901.

ABDURRAHMAN, Khan.

Wheeler, Stephen. Ameer Abdur Rahman. 1895. (Public men of to-day.).....92 A136w

Life of the ruler of Afghanistan, who was proclaimed ameer in 1880.

ABERDEEN, George Hamilton Gordon, earl of.

Gordon, Sir Arthur Hamilton. Earl of Aberdeen. 1893. (Prime ministers of Queen Victoria.).....92 A143g

British statesman of the early 19th century. In 1814, he signed the Treaty of Paris as one of the representatives of Great Britain and was premier in 1852-55, his ministry being formed by a coalition of Whigs and Peelites.

"There was little in his public career to dazzle the spectator, or to command instant or excessive admiration; and neither his mental powers nor rare personal charm can now be fairly appreciated, except by those who, like the author of this book, lived in close personal intercourse with him, and have had access to the mass of his correspondence, public and private." Dial, 1893.

ABERNETHY, John.

Macilwain, George. Memoirs of John Abernethy, with a view of his lectures, writings and character. 1853. . . . 92 A146m
 Abernethy (1764-1831) had in his lifetime the highest reputation as a surgeon, anatomist and physiologist, and exercised great influence on his profession.

ABINGTON, Mrs Frances (Barton).

Life of Mrs Abington, celebrated comic actress, with full accounts of her various performances in the theatres of London and Dublin, also notes upon the history of the Irish stage and notices, anecdotes and criticisms of her theatrical contemporaries, by the editor of the "Life of Quin." 1888. 92 A149
 Mrs Abington (1737-1815) was the daughter of a private soldier in the Guards. From the position of a flower-girl she rose to eminence on the stage and enjoyed a successful career of 43 years. She was the original representative of 30 characters, the most famous being her crowning triumph, Lady Teazle.

ABRANTÈS, Laure (Permon) Junot, duchesse d'. See JUNOT, Laure (Permon), duchesse d'Abrantès.

ADAMS, Mrs Abigail (Smith).

Letters. 2v. 1840. 92 A2112
 Memoir, by C. F. Adams, v.1, p.13-84.
 These letters of Abigail Adams, wife of John Adams, second president of the United States, give a valuable picture of the times, and glimpses of many stirring events. The collection contains letters to her husband during the Revolution and letters to her family, when she was with Mr Adams in Paris, London, Philadelphia and Washington.

ADAMS, Charles Francis, 1807-86.

Adams, Charles Francis, b. 1835. Charles Francis Adams.
 1900. (American statesmen.) 92 A211a
The same. 1900. (American statesmen.) 92 A211a
 Mr Adams's public life covered a period of only 13 years and was almost entirely connected with events of the Civil war. In this biography by his son we have clearly defined the character and value of his services as minister to England and member of the Geneva tribunal.

ADAMS, John, 1735-1826, & Cunningham, William, of Fitchburg, Mass.

Correspondence, beginning in 1803 and ending in 1812.
 1823. 92 A214
 Written by the ex-president to a relative, shortly after being defeated for re-election. They were under the seal of the strictest confidence and dealt with the chief actors and events in the latter part of his public life. They were vehement, abusive and unjust. Mr C. F. Adams says that an heir of Cunningham gave them to the opponents of John Quincy Adams to be used against him when he was a candidate for the presidency. It was a great mistake upon Adams's part that he wrote them, and a grave misfortune that they were published, even though dishonorably and many years afterward.

ADAMS, John, 1735-1826.

Adams, Charles Francis, 1807-86. Life of John Adams;
 begun by John Q. Adams. 2v. in 1. 1871. 92 A214a
 John Adams, second president of the United States, was one of the leaders of the patriot party in Massachusetts before the Revolution, signer of the Declaration of independence and prominent in political life till 1801. This biography is a republication of the one first published only in connection with his collected works in 1856, and therefore comparatively inaccessible.

Morse, John Torrey. John Adams. 1893. (American statesmen.) 92 A214m

The same. 1899. (American statesmen.).....r92 A214m

"We have John Adams the man and patriot, in all his rugged honesty, full of courage in great emergencies when others fell away, pugnacious, wise, when his judgment was not clouded by passion, a statesman without tact, vain and conceited, yet always a patriot, possessing the traits found in most of the world's great heroes, yet not reaching the stature of a hero. It is a truthful portrait." Dial, 1885.

ADAMS, John, 1772-1863.

Brown, Mrs Mary Elizabeth (Adams), & Mrs Helen Gilman (Noyes). Story of John Adams, a New England schoolmaster. 1900.....r92 A2143b

Dr John Adams was well known as an educator, being principal of Phillips academy, Andover, Mass., 1810-32.

ADAMS, John Quincy.

Memoirs; comprising portions of his diary from 1795 to 1848; ed. by C. F. Adams. 12v. 1874-77.....r92 A2142

"Volumes of surpassing interest on the personal and political life of one of the noblest and most accomplished of our public men. The most striking and interesting peculiarity of the diary is the fulness of the author's reflections and comments on the men and on the events among which he lived." C. K. Adams.

The same. 1899. (American statesmen.).....r92 A2142m

"That Mr. Morse's conclusions will be those of posterity, we have very little doubt, and he has set an admirable example to his coadjutors in respect of interesting narrative, just proportion and judicial candor. If entire patriotism, incorruptibility, political fairness, prescience, initiative and high physical and moral courage are the marks of statesmanship it would be difficult to point to any of his contemporaries or successors who possessed them in an equal degree with Mr. Adams." Nation, 1882.

Quincy, Josiah, 1772-1864. Memoir of the life of John Quincy Adams. 1859.....r92 A2142q

"The light attempted to be thrown on his course has been derived from personal acquaintance, from his public works, and from authentic unpublished materials. The chief endeavor has been to render him the expositor of his own motives, principles, and character, without fear or favor,—in the spirit neither of criticism or eulogy." Prefatory note.

ADAMS, Samuel.

Hosmer, James Kendall. Samuel Adams. 1893. (American statesmen.).....r92 A217h

The same. 1899. (American statesmen.).....r92 A217h1

A study of the New England town meeting with Adams in the foreground.

"He was possessed with the instinct of agitation: led the people, not the leaders; cared not for place, but only for power; showed a mastery of means, a self containment, a capacity for timely and telling speech, that marked him a statesman, though he loved the rough ways of a people's government, and preferred the fierce democracy of the town meeting to the sober dignity of senates." Woodrow Wilson's George Washington.

"Interesting and appreciative Life of Adams—one which fairly sets forth the man, his work, and his times." Nation, 1885.

Wells, William Vincent. Life and public services of Samuel Adams, with extracts from his correspondence, state papers and political essays. 3v. 1865.....r92 A217w

"One of the most valuable contributions to our knowledge of the Revolutionary period. It was not written so much for the purpose of constructing a fascinating narrative as to give a sober account of the great events in which Samuel Adams took so conspicuous a part. The early years of his life are therefore rapidly passed over, and the principal part of the work is devoted to his Revolutionary services." C. K. Adams.

ADDISON, Joseph.

- Courthope, William John. Addison. [1884.] (English men of letters.).....92 A225c
 "It is praise enough to say of a writer, that in a high department of literature, in which many eminent writers have distinguished themselves he has had no equal; and this may, with strict justice, be said of Addison...He is entitled to be considered not only as the greatest of the English essayists, but as the forerunner of the great English novelists...His best essays approach near to absolute perfection; nor is their excellence more wonderful than their variety." Macaulay's Essay on Addison.

AGASSIZ, Louis.

- Agassiz, Mrs Elizabeth (Cary). Louis Agassiz; his life and correspondence. 1893.....92 A262a
 This biography by his wife gives pictures of Agassiz's early life in Switzerland, tells of his friendships with Cuvier, Humboldt and other distinguished scientists, of his scientific work, particularly in geology and ichthyology, of his work at Harvard including the founding of the Agassiz museum. The enthusiasm which he always kindled in others and his rare personal charm are felt throughout the book.
- Gould, Alice Bache. Louis Agassiz. 1901. (Beacon biographies of eminent Americans.).....92 A262g
 Bibliography, p.149-154.
 Short sketch, giving the main facts of his career and quite a vivid idea of his personality.
- Marcou, Jules. Life, letters and works of Louis Agassiz. 2v. 1896.....92 A262m Author was one of the European naturalists who came to America with Agassiz in 1846, and he was his friend for nearly 30 years.
 "Particularly remarkable for raking up old personalities and forgotten scientific quarrels." Nation, 1896.

AGNEW, David Hayes.

- Adams, Jedidiah Howe. History of the life of D. Hayes Agnew. 1892.....92 A273a
 Dr Agnew (1818-92) was an eminent American surgeon and from 1871 to 1889 professor of surgery in the University of Pennsylvania.

AIRY, Sir George Biddell.

- Autobiography; ed. by Wilfrid Airy. 1896.....92 A298
 List of printed papers and books by Sir G. B. Airy, p.369-404.
 Airy (1801-92) was astronomer royal for 46 years, and this autobiography deals less with his private life than with his scientific work, which was varied and extensive.

AKBAR, emperor of India.

- Malleson, George Bruce. Akbar and the rise of the Mughal empire. 1896. (Rulers of India.).....92 A313m
 Akbar, the real founder of the Mughal, or Mogul, empire in India, was a contemporary of Queen Elizabeth of England. He was specially famed as a civil administrator, striving to reconcile the various races under his rule and bringing about many reforms. He seems to have been in some ways distinctly modern, particularly in regard to religious toleration.

ALBANY, Louise Marie Caroline von Stolberg-Gedern, countess of.

- Paget, Violet, (pseud. Vernon Lee). Countess of Albany. 1897. (Famous women.).....92 A326p
 "List of authorities consulted," in the preface.
 "The great figure of her book is...Alfieri...By this figure, so strange yet so grand even in its contradictions, stands another more perfect as a contrast, a foil to it, than any novelist could have imagined. If there be in history one man more than another for whom friends should mourn that the privilege of an early death was denied to him, that man is the Young Pretender, Charles Edward. Vernon Lee... does not spare the adjectives to describe him in the days when he had 'let himself become a disgrace to the very memory of the men who had died for him.' Such he was when married by French intrigues to Louise of Stolberg... We have named her the last of the three because her place in the book is least, though as Countess of Albany she gives her name to it." Nation, 1884.

ALBERT, prince consort of England.

Grey, Charles, 1804-70. Early years of the prince consort; comp. under the direction of the queen. 1867.....92 A333g

Author was for some years Prince Albert's private secretary.

This memoir extends to 1840 only.

Martin, Sir Theodore. Life of the prince consort. 1882..92 A333m

Written at the request of Queen Victoria.

"Throughout the work courtly reticence has been reconciled with independent judgment, and sincere appreciation has never expressed itself in the language of flattery." Saturday review, 1880.

Cheney, Mrs Ednah Dow (Littlehale), ed. Louisa May

Alcott; her life, letters and journals. 1892.....92 A355c

The same. 1902.....j92 A355c

Daughter of A. Bronson Alcott and author of "Little women" and other popular books for young people.

"It is an unstudied, almost fragmentary memoir which Mrs. Cheney has edited with wise reserve and good taste." Atlantic monthly, 1890.

ALCUIN.

West, Andrew Fleming. Alcuin and the rise of the Christian schools. 1892. (Great educators.).....92 A356w

"Books on Alcuin," p.197-198.

Alcuin was educated at York, and settled on the continent in 782, on the invitation and under the protection of Charlemagne. He was master of the school of the palace and served as general superintendent of Charlemagne's schemes of ecclesiastical and educational reform.

"Combines careful scholarly investigation with popularity." George Trumbull Ladd.

ALEXANDER I, czar of Russia.

Choiseul-Gouffier, comtesse de. Historical memoirs of Alexander I and the court of Russia; tr. fr. the original

French by M. B. Patterson. 1900.....92 A3743c

"Translation...of the book...produced in 1828, three years after the Czar's death...The comtesse...had the advantage of knowing the Czar well, but her writing is frothy and vain where her own contact with the Russian court is to be described, and her moralizing is of the most vapid kind." Nation, 1900.

ALEXANDER II, czar of Russia.

[Joyneville, C.] Life of Alexander II, emperor of all the

Russias. 1883.....92 A3741j

Author lived for a long time in Russia and on the personal history of the czar he is well informed and his account is interesting. His narrative of the political history of the reign is written from the strongly Russian standpoint.

ALEXANDER III, czar of Russia.

Lowe, Charles. Alexander III of Russia. 1895.....92 A3742l

Clear, interesting and fairly impartial memoir, though it is written rather from the British standpoint, and the author's sympathies are plainly not with Russia. The first chapter contains an excellent summary of the history of Alexander's ancestors from Catharine II, and there are interesting accounts of certain great ceremonies which the author witnessed.

ALEXANDER THE GREAT.

Abbott, Jacob. History of Alexander the Great. 1876....92 A374a

This history of the famous Macedonian king and conqueror was written 50 years ago and in its style is quite different from the present approved manner of writing biography for the young, but, in common with the other biographies and histories by the same author, it was exceedingly popular in its day, and is still much read.

Dodge, Theodore Ayrault. Alexander; a history of the origin and growth of the art of war, to the battle of Ipsus, B. C. 301, with a detailed account of the campaigns of the great Macedonian. 1890. (Great captains.).....92 A374d

The best ancient and modern authorities have been consulted to make up a complete history of Alexander's wars, and the author has taken great pains to explain and describe the equipments and tactics of the Greeks and Persians. Illustrated with many charts, maps, topographical sketches and woodcuts of armor.

Hogarth, David George. Philip and Alexander of Macedonia; two essays in biography. 1897.....92 P4951h

"Author speaks to the cultivated public rather than to the scholar...He mentions only the telling facts, pursues only the main line of events; and, thus avoiding detail, gives us a remarkably perspicuous narrative of the rise of Philip's kingdom and Alexander's empire." Nation, 1897.

Wheeler, Benjamin Ide. Alexander the Great; the merging of East and West in universal history. 1900. (Heroes of the nations.).....92 A374w

"A history of the period as well as of the man...Tells the story of Alexander's aims and achievements with considerable detail and admirable clearness." Nation, 1900.

ALFIERI, Vittorio, conte.

Autobiography, with an essay by W. D. Howells. 1877. (Autobiographic series.).....92 A387

Famous Italian tragic poet and dramatist of the 18th century.

"Work of intense interest, and perhaps the most thoroughly sincere among celebrated books of its order of literature. It depicts a man continually under the influence of pride and discontent, but whom pride and discontent stimulate to lofty endeavour and noble actions... This psychological interest is relieved and enhanced by the details of his numerous adventures, his extensive travels, and his love affairs, three of which were memorable." Garnett's Italian literature.

ALFRED THE GREAT, king of England.

Abbott, Jacob. History of King Alfred. 1877.....92 A392a

Besant, Sir Walter. Story of King Alfred. 1901. (Library of useful stories.).....92 A392be

Good short history of the career of Alfred and the position of England in the 9th century.

Bowker, Alfred, ed. Alfred the Great. 1899.....92 A392b

Contents: Introduction, by Sir Walter Besant.—Alfred as king, by Frederic Harrison.—Alfred as a religious man and an educationalist, by G. F. Browne.—Alfred as a warrior, by Charles Oman.—Alfred as a geographer, by Sir Clements Markham.—Alfred as a writer, by John Earle.—English law before the Norman conquest, by Sir Frederick Pollock.—Alfred and the arts, by W. J. Loftie.

Conybeare, Edward. Alfred in the chronicles. 1900....92 A392c

"Purpose is to put before unlearned readers in their own language all those passages of our early historians which can possibly rank as sources for either the real or the legendary history of King Alfred...An introduction, giving an account of Alfred's life and work, is prefixed, and the book is accompanied by a map of England in the 9th century...Unfortunately the workmanship is far from being altogether scholarly...Considering the popular object of the book, its defects are not likely to do much harm, and for many readers it may be both instructive and entertaining." Athenaeum, 1900.

Gives Alfred's will and several other documents in Saxon, and makes much use of old chronicles and histories, but is now regarded as more curious than valuable.
- Hughes, Thomas. Alfred the Great. 1891.....92 A392h
"A book with a direct, practical purpose, not merely the biography of a great man. He does not profess to be an original explorer in the history of those times...[he] aims to turn the lessons of history to the account of the highest and most pressing needs of his own generation." Nation, 1870.
- Page, Jesse. Alfred the Great, the father of the English.
[1900.].....92 A392pa
Author has made a special point of presenting the social and religious conditions of the age, and in order to increase "the general interest and lifelikeness of the narrative" includes many familiar, but entirely traditional events.

Bibliography of the writings of Grant Allen published in book form, p.213-222.
"Grant Allen's life was charged with tragic interest...He had to live by his pen, and he soon learned that living by his pen, in the regions he was specially equipped for—namely, science and philosophy—meant starvation. Then he tried his hand at every branch of literature, and displayed versatility which was truly marvellous. He achieved success...But success came too late...He had been constantly thinking, planning and scheming to produce wares to catch the literary market, and this ceaseless mental activity and worry wore him out, and cut short his life at a comparatively early age." Academy, 1900.

"Signor de Amicis is the most candid of autobiographers—he writes with an irony that subtly tells against himself, of his ambitions, his frequent discomfitures, his love of praise, his susceptibilities, his impetuosity, and finally of all the circumstances that decided his career as a man of letters." Saturday review, 1901.

Short stories and sketches fill the last half of the volume.

AMIEL, Henri Frédéric.

Fragments d'un journal intime. 2v. in 1. 1897.....92 A516f

Journal intime; tr. by Mrs Humphry Ward. 1893.....92 A516

"Amiel has been much compared with Obermann and Maurice de Guérin, but he is far nearer to us than either...There was in Amiel that deeper seriousness which we characterize by the word Puritan. It is for that type of religious mind, of which there are very many among English speaking peoples, even though they disavow the name, that the book will have the strongest attraction." Nation, 1886.

AMMEN, Daniel.

The old navy and the new; memoirs. 1898.....92 A518

Life in the United States navy from the time the author entered the service as a midshipman of 16 to his resignation as admiral in 1877. Contains much of interest concerning the evolution of war-ships, and the naval contests of the Civil war.

ANDERSEN, Hans Christian.

Story of my life. 1871.....92 A544

"The absolute candor with which Andersen lays bare his soul, the complete intentional or unintentional self-revelation, gives a psychological value to the book which no mere literary graces could bestow..."

Andersen remained, until the day of his death, a child. His innocence was more than virginal; his unworldliness simply inconceivable... He conceived of his life as a fairy-tale... The feeling of the marvellous pervades the book from beginning to end." Boyesen's Essays on Scandinavian literature.

The autobiography brings the narrative down to 1867. An account of his later years will be found in Bain's "Hans Christian Andersen," p. 2544b.

Bain, Robert Nisbet. Hans Christian Andersen. 1895...92 A544b

"He retells the story, soberly, carefully, critically, perhaps with a little less than full fellow-feeling for the wayward, daemonic, half-irrational, half-inspired element in Andersen's character, but certainly with great fulness of knowledge not only as regards the facts of Andersen's own life, and the books by him and about him, but also as regards Danish literature generally." Academy, 1896.

ANDERSON, Mary, afterward Mme de Navarro.

A few memories. 1896...92 A548

Mary Anderson played with much success such parts as Juliet, Perdita, Galatea, Rosalind, etc. from 1875 to 1889, when she retired from the stage.

"As a contribution to theatrical literature her volume is of very small importance, but as a bit of autobiography it is exceedingly interesting... From first to last... there is not one note of affectation or insincerity... The real interest and charm lie in the story of her life outside the theatre... of the friendship of many of the most distinguished men and women of the day." Nation, 1896.

Fanny Burney's social advantages were great and the years of intercourse with brilliant people gave her unusual knowledge of the world. Not long after the publication of "Cecilia" she accepted a position at the court as keeper of the robes to Queen Charlotte. Her "Diary

 There is only so much narrative as will enable the reader to take up the letters with a right understanding of the writer's opinions at different periods, and so far as possible his plans and opinions are given in his own words. Dean Stanley was chosen by Dr Arnold's family for the work, and has availed himself of the contributions of others who might have had better opportunities of knowing Dr Arnold, especially in early life. His own acquaintance with his subject began when Stanley was a pupil at Rugby, and extended with increasing intimacy until Dr Arnold's death in 1842, and it is to the latter's work as master of Rugby, with which his name is most closely associated in the general mind, that most space is given.

ARNOLD, Thomas, 1823-1900.

Passages in a wandering life. 1900.....92 A7592

"Account of his mental and spiritual wanderings is much more interesting than that of his corporeal ones. When he goes back to a generation of great men now dead—when he tells us how he went into the Catholic church—and out and in again—we are delighted, but his journeyings in New Zealand, Tasmania, and Sweden and Italy are hardly worth writing about. Of his father, Dr. Arnold, he tells us little that is new—there cannot be much left to tell—but his friends at Fox How, and his boyish recollections of Wordsworth, Southey, Professor Wilson, and Hartley Coleridge, are well worth reading." Spectator, 1900.

"Audubon," by M. R. Audubon, v.1, p.5-77.

Audubon is celebrated chiefly for his drawings and paintings of birds.

In pursuit of specimens for his work he made many journeys and in his journals and letters describing them we feel his remarkable enthusiasm and tireless patience.

"Miss Audubon has done her work well...She has made an important contribution to the historical and zoological literature of America, and has erected to the memory of Audubon a useful and enduring monument." Nation, 1898.

Audubon, Mrs Lucy (Bakewell). Life of John James Audubon, the naturalist; ed. by his widow, with an introduction by J. G. Wilson. 1894.....92 A916a

AUGUSTA, empress of Germany.

Tschudi, Clara. Augusta, empress of Germany; authorised

tr. fr. the Norwegian by E. M. Cope. 1900.....92 A9232t

An interesting biography in which many historical events are skilfully interwoven with the personal narrative of the life of the empress Augusta, who was the wife of Emperor William I and the grandmother of William II.

AUGUSTINE, St.

Hatzfeld, Adolphe. Saint Augustine; tr. by E. Holt.

1898. (The saints.) 92 A9231h
 After a brief sketch of the life of the saint and penitent, pieced together mainly from the "Confessions," the author gives us in two short chapters a general review of the teachings of St. Augustine from the Roman Catholic point of view.
- AUGUSTINE, St. abp. of Canterbury.
 Cutts, Edward Lewes. Augustine of Canterbury. 1895 92 A923c
 Dr Cutts does not limit himself to a biography of St. Augustine, but gives some account of the work of his successors up to the accession of Theodore, about 60 years after St. Augustine's death.
- AURELIUS ANTONINUS, Marcus. emperor of Rome.
 Watson, Paul Barron. Marcus Aurelius Antoninus.
 1884. 92 A927w
 "Marked by thorough scholarship, industry, and a clear judgment of historical relations, and by an excellent English style. . . . The principal defect of the book . . . is an inadequate treatment of the condition of society and institutions at this period." Nation, 1884.

 Smith, John Talbot. Brother Azarias; the life story of an American monk. 1897. 92 A992s
 An Irish-American, member of the Roman Catholic order of Christian brothers, whose lives are devoted to teaching. He was superior of the Rock Hill college at Ellicott City, Md. for several years and spent the last four years of his life, 1889-93, in the De La Salle institute, New York. He was the author of various books on philosophy, literature and education.
- AZEGLIO, Massimo Tapparelli, marchese d'.
 I miei ricordi. 1895. 92 A993
 "The life of a man who was soldier, artist, diplomatist, novelist, and statesman; whose earliest reminiscences were of Alfieri and the Countess of Albany, and who lived to be introduced to the present heir-apparent of the British throne; who, born in the highest social circle, mingled by choice and by profession with members of every class, and who exercised no small influence upon the destinies of his native Italy, can hardly fail to present some points of interest."
Quarterly review, 1867.
 "This character of individuality, which impressed its stamp on his whole life, is charmingly revealed in every sentence of the memoirs which he has left behind him; so that, more than any of his previous writings, their homeliness and wit and wisdom justify the epithet which I once before ventured to give him when I described him as 'the Giusti of Italian prose.'"
 Recollections; tr. by Count Maffei. 2v. in 1. 1868. 92 A993r

- BABBAGE, Charles.
 Passages from the life of a philosopher. 1864.....r92 B114
 English mathematician, chiefly known as the inventor of a calculating machine which, after years of toil, he failed to perfect. The book is more concerned with his experiments than with the personal details of his life, and is marred by a certain bitterness of tone.

 List of the musical works of Samuel Wesley, p.51-60.
 Samuel Wesley, the son of Charles, was a distinguished musician, the greatest organist of his day.
 "The great event of Wesley's life was his vigorous propaganda of the works of John Sebastian Bach in this country [England]...During 1808 and 1809 he addressed a series of characteristic letters on the subject to Benjamin Jacob, then organist of Surrey Chapel. These letters, edited by his daughter Eliza Wesley were published in 1875." Dictionary of national biography.
- Williams, Charles Francis Abdy. Bach. 1900. (Master musicians.)92 B125w

BALFE, Michael William.

Barrett, William Alexander. Balfe; his life and work.

1882.92 B196b

Irish violinist and operatic composer (1808-70).

"There is in the book so much that is curious and interesting to people interested in musical matters, so much that is eminently readable by people that have no special interest in such matters...that the author may be excused for his shortcomings, odd as some of them are." Saturday review, 1882.

Kennedy, Charles Lamb. Memoir of Michael William

Balfe. 1875.....92 B196k

"The book is full of anecdote, and we find no fault with the writer's enthusiasm for his subject." Spectator, 1875.

BALLANTINE, William.

Some experiences of a barrister's life. 1883.....92 B213

English barrister, counsel for the claimant in the original suit of the famous Tichborne case.

"The first judgment of most readers must be unfavourable; but as they go along the author's frankness and easy good nature will please them and help to atone for the great defects of arrangement and of

- style... There are plenty of good anecdotes scattered about the book."
Athenæum, 1883.
- BALTIMORE, George Calvert, baron.
Browne, William Hand. George Calvert and Cecilius Calvert, barons Baltimore of Baltimore. 1890. (Makers of America.).....92 B217b
"Altogether this is a solid and scholarly performance, well planned and adapted to its subject, with little attempt at description of manners, with few moving accidents, never exciting, but excellently written and readable. It is worth the attention of people interested in the early history of Maryland and of the United States. It has, moreover, the great merit of brevity, containing less than 200 small pages."
Nation, 1890.
- BALZAC, Honoré de.
Letters to Mme Hanska, born Countess Rzewuska, afterwards Mme Honoré de Balzac, 1833-1846; tr. by K. P. Wormeley. 1900.....92 B2181
"The simple story of these letters is as follows. In February, 1833, Balzac received a letter, posted in Russia, from a lady who signed herself 'l'Étrangère' ('Foreigner'). This letter is not known to exist, nor is there any authentic knowledge of its contents; but it began a correspondence between its writer and Balzac which ended in their marriage in 1850." Translator's preface.
- Personal opinions, taken from his correspondence and his miscellaneous writings; comp. and tr. by K. P. Wormeley. 1899.....92 B218 Concerning history, politics, literature, art and some of his own works.
- Wedmore, Frederick. Life of Honoré de Balzac. 1890. (Great writers.).....92 B218we
Bibliography, apx. p. 1-15.
"The best part of Mr. Wedmore's book is the biographical. It is accurate in matters of detail, and on the whole judiciously discriminative... Written with sufficient ease, grace, and spirit to deserve more than one reading." Nation, 1890.
- Wormeley, Katharine Prescott. Memoir of Honoré de Balzac. 1892.....92 B218w
List of Balzac's writings, p. 357-364.
Taken partly from the narrative of his sister, Mme Surville. More biographical than critical.
- BANCROFT, Hubert Howe.
Literary industries; a memoir. 1890.....92 B223
In 1852 Mr Bancroft established an extensive book business in San Francisco and began to collect books and documents relating to the Pacific states, acquiring 60,000 volumes, tracts and mss. Upon this library, which was elaborately indexed, he founded his "History of the Pacific states" in 39 volumes. This book tells the story of his great undertaking.
- BARLOW, Joel.
Todd, Charles Burr. Life and letters of Joel Barlow, with extracts from his works. 1886.....92 B248t
Joel Barlow (1755-1812) was a prominent figure in early American literature. His verse for the most part is stilted and declamatory, but his "Hasty pudding," a poetical reminiscence of New England among Italian scenes, still affords pleasant reading, and is genuinely humorous.
- BARNATO, Barnett Isaacs.

 "Barriana," p.255-257; bibliography of Barrie's works, p.258-264.
 Does not pretend to be a formal biography, nor a comprehensive critical study, but aims to supply biographical and bibliographical data.
- BARRIE, Mrs Margaret (Ogilvy).
 Barrie, James Matthew. Margaret Ogilvy. 1896.....92 B266b
 This memoir of Barrie's mother is eloquent of family love and filial devotion and respect. It deals most delicately with the tender and intimate relations between a mother and her son, and reveals an individual character, shrewd, mirthful, pious and intensely human. It necessarily includes much that relates to her son's life and work.

- BASHKIRTSEFF, Marie.
 Journal of a young artist, 1860-1884; tr. by M. J. Serrano. 1889.92 B291
 "It is not alone the outspoken wit, longing, and opinions of a girl writing for her own heart, and poising for her public at the same moment, but the self-revelation of a gifted and forceful nature, working itself out through successive phases of a life which, concentrated into a few short years, leaves an impression almost complete in its distinctness." Atlantic monthly, 1889.
- Last confessions, and Correspondence with Guy de Maupassant. 1901.....92 B291l
 "Interest is the same as that which gave the first diaries their popularity; but the present volume is more painful, covering as it does the last year of that brilliant, ambitious and restless creature... We see Marie making fashions, but no friends; criticizing society, pining for real expert praise of her pictures, flirting with Guy de Maupassant in a series of letters under a mask of anonymity; and over all... the restless energy, so soon faded, of the consumptive." Athenæum, 1901.

BASS, Edward, bp.

Addison, Daniel Dulany. Life and times of Edward Bass, first bishop of Massachusetts. 1897.....92 B295a

(Prime ministers of Queen Victoria.).....92 B342f
"Three fifths of it are occupied with the early history and struggles of Mr. Disraeli down to the fall of Sir Robert Peel... The romantic interest attaching to the beginning of his marvellous career is so great that we should not blame his biographer for devoting only the lesser of the two portions of the book to the succeeding thirty-five years had that remainder been entirely given to the life and actions of the leader and reconstructor of the Tory party." Athenæum, 1890.

BENSON, Edward White, abp. of Canterbury.

Benson, Arthur Christopher. Life of Edward White Benson, archbishop of Canterbury. 1901.....92 B443b
Abridged from the first two-volume issue.

"Many circumstances combined to invest the fourteen years of his Primacy [1882-96] with exceptional importance...The...book is an important contribution to the ecclesiastical history of this century...It is also extremely good reading, and contains more than the ordinary proportion of racy and humorous anecdotes...We lay down these volumes...with a greatly enhanced opinion of the late Primate's ability, a juster estimate of his great work for the Church of England, and a warm affection for his interesting and complex personality." Saturday review, 1900.

"Benton [1782-1858] is worth studying both as a type and individual. Mr. Roosevelt has most correctly shown that he is a representative of the West in its early generation, as distinguished at once from the East and the South...In his account of the strife of parties during the administrations of Jackson, Van Buren, and Tyler, the author has aimed to combine a reasonable regard for the demands, motives and passions of the time with the coolness of a philosophic historian." Nation, 1888.

BÉRANGER, Pierre Jean de.

Memoirs, written by himself. 1858.....92 B448

Gives the principal events of his poetic and political life.

"In all his works, in lyrics of levity, of politics, of worldly reflection,—Béranger...has given us an idea of the essential French character, such as we fancy it must be, but can never for ourselves hope to see that it is." Bagehot's Literary studies.

BERKELEY, George.

Fraser, Alexander Campbell. Berkeley. 1894.....92 B455f

Berkeley (1684-1753) was one of the most profound and original of English philosophers. He lived for several years near Newport, R. I. and gave a strong stimulus to philosophical and classical studies in America. This small biography presents Berkeley's philosophy in connection with his personal history.

Fraser, Alexander Campbell. Life and letters of George Berkeley. 1871.....92 B455f1

"A necessary help to a study of the eccentric French genius, but as a literary work woefully deficient in that it has no index and few references to dates." H. E. Krehbiel.

BERNARD, St. abbot of Clairvaux.

Morison, James Cotter. Life and times of St. Bernard, abbot of Clairvaux. 1889.....92 B456m

Bernard exercised great influence on the intellectual and spiritual life of his time and was one of the controlling forces of ecclesiastical politics of Europe. His was the strongest influence in prevailing upon France and England to recognize Innocent II as pope in opposition to the rival claimant, and his preaching is largely responsible for the second crusade.

"A book which was praised by Mark Pattison, Matthew Arnold, and Cardinal Manning. It shows great historical knowledge and a keen interest in the mediæval church." Dictionary of national biography.

BERNARD, Claude.

Foster, Sir Michael. Claude Bernard. 1899. (Masters of medicine.).....92 B456zf

"No one, perhaps, is better fitted to give an account of the French master of modern physiology than Sir Michael Foster, himself the representative physiologist of England, and the founder of the Cambridge school. But Sir Michael has hardly done justice to himself or his subject...The early chapters are hastily and rather carelessly written...There is a good portrait of Claude Bernard...and a sufficient index." Literature, 1899.

BERRY, Marie Caroline de Bourbon, duchesse de.

Imbert de Saint-Amand, Arthur Léon, baron. Duchess of

Berry and the court of Charles X. 1894.....92 B459s

Second volume of the series. Presents a picture of the intrigues of the French court and the causes which finally led to the revolution of 1830.

Imbert de Saint-Amand, Arthur Léon, baron. Duchess of

Berry and the court of Louis XVIII. 1892.....92 B459sa

The duchess of Berry (1798-1870) was the wife of Charles Ferdinand, duke of Berry and mother to the comte de Chambord. This, the first of a series of three volumes on the duchess of Berry, covers her girlhood and brief married life.

Imbert de Saint-Amand, Arthur Léon, baron. Duchess of

Berry and the revolution of 1830. 1893.....92 B459sai

Third and final volume on the duchess of Berry. Describes abdication and flight of Charles X and accession of Louis Philippe.

BERRY, Mary.

Extracts of her journals and correspondence, from 1783 to 1852. 3v. 1865.....92 B459i

Biographical sketch of Miss Berry, v.1, p.13-41.

For over 70 years Mary Berry and her sister Agnes were constantly in society both at home and abroad and, having peculiar social talents and literary tastes and pursuits, they knew well the most distinguished people of that long period. Horace Walpole was an intimate friend and Miss Berry's first literary task was editing his works.

Letters, 1836-1847; ed. by G. W. A. Kahlbaum, tr. by F. V.

Darbishire and N. V. Sidgwick. 1900.....92 B465

Berzelius (1779-1847) enriched and developed chemistry to an extent not exceeded by any other man. Perhaps his greatest contributions to chemistry were his development of the atomic theory, his electrochemical theory, and his dualistic system. Schönbein (1799-1868) is chiefly known as the discoverer of ozone and gun-cotton. The letters are chiefly devoted to ozone, gun-cotton and theoretical subjects.

BESANT, Sir Walter.

"Besides being an engraver, he was, in his own way, an artist of remarkable capacity as a faithful interpreter of animal life, and a genuine humourist of a sub-Hogarthian type...As an engraver Bewick has been justly styled the restorer of wood engraving in England. It is to the impulse which it received from his individual genius that its revival as an art must be ascribed." Dictionary of national biography.

BÈZE, Théodore de.

Baird, Henry Martyn. Theodore Beza, counsellor of the French reformation, 1519-1605. 1899.....92 B469b

Bibliography, p.17-21.

"Of the heroes of the Reformation Theodore Beza is by no means the least attractive. His course of activity was long and brilliant. He presided over the Reformed Church in the French-speaking countries through a protracted series of years, its recognized counsellor and leader in times of peril both to Church and to State. The friend of Calvin, he was also the friend and adviser of Henry IV until within five years of that monarch's end." Preface.

BIDDLE, Charles.

Autobiography, 1745-1821. 1883.....92 B475

Born in Philadelphia in 1745, he followed the sea in early life, later he was vice-president of the Supreme executive council of Pennsylvania and held other offices. He was a friend of Franklin and Burr, and the book contains hitherto unpublished letters from Burr and others. He was the father of Nicholas Biddle, the financier, of Richard Biddle of Pittsburgh, and of James Biddle, the distinguished naval officer.

- Bismarck, the man & the statesman; reflections and reminiscences written after his retirement from office. 2v.
1899.92 B497bi
Valuable for sidelight, particularly to students of political history, who care little for the lighter matters of personality and anecdote.
- Love letters of Bismarck; letters to his fiancée and wife, 1846-1889. 1901.92 B497lv
"Reveals Bismarck in an entirely new light. The self-portraiture shows a forcible tenderness that will surprise such as associate only shrewd insight and bull-dog tenacity with the statesman... This volume is a part of history." Saturday review, 1901.
- Table-talk. 1895.92 B497
Based on Herr von Poschinger's five volumes of Bismarck's table-talk, compiled from a great variety of sources, private communications, etc., and covering his life from boyhood to his retirement in 1890.
- Andler, Charles. Le prince de Bismarck. 1899.92 B497a
"Sources," p.395-400.
General sketch of Bismarck, his character and policy.
"Author knows the history of the period, is familiar with German life, and evidently has read all the voluminous Bismarck literature that is worth reading. He writes with creditable control of his national bias." Nation, 1899.
- Busch, Moritz. Bismarck; some secret pages of his history. 2v. 1898.92 B497bus
The author entered the German foreign office in 1870 and from that time was a special follower and great admirer of Bismarck. After the latter's retirement, Dr Busch was still his frequent and intimate guest. The foundation of this book is a diary covering 25 years of official and private intercourse with the great chancellor. Its publication was authorized by Bismarck. It is a most complete and frank record of a great man's career written by a devoted adherent.
- Busch, Moritz. Bismarck und sein werk; beiträge zur inneren geschichte der letzten jahre bis 1896, nach tagebuchsblättern. 1898.92 B497bu Small collection of extracts from Busch's diary and from public and private papers to which Bismarck gave him access.
- Busch, Moritz. Our chancellor. 2v. in 1. 1884.92 B497b
Not in any sense a biography of Bismarck, but a series of essays on his character and statesmanship, beginning with "the chancellor's profession of faith and moral code of statesmanship" and going on to discuss separate aspects of his public work, especially his relations with Austria, Russia and France. Comes down to 1883.
- Görlach, Wilhelm. Fürst Bismarck; eine lebensbeschreibung. 1885.92 B497g Short sketch for younger readers showing the influence he exerted on the formation of the Germany of to-day.
- Headlam, James Wycliffe. Bismarck and the foundation of the German empire. 1899. (Heroes of the nations.)92 B497he Popular general view of his life and character.
"The novelty of Mr. Headlam's work lies in his treatment of the career of Bismarck in his later labors as chancellor of the German Empire." Dial, 1900.
- Hoche, Jules. The real Bismarck. 1898.92 B497h
Also published with the title "Bismarck at home."
The real Bismarck, according to M. Hoche, is first of all a humorist, which explains his apparent inconsistencies and exaggerations, also the "chameleon-like" charm of his personality. The book is largely a compilation of anecdotes from newspapers and the older Bismarck literature.

- Lowe, Charles. Prince Bismarck. 1896.....92 B497lo
 "Since the appearance of my large two-volume work, 'Prince Bismarck: An Historical Biography,' ten years ago, much fresh material on my subject has come to light; and the substance of this up-to-date material—sometimes corrective, sometimes supplementary—I have incorporated in the present sketch." Preface.
- Lowe, Charles. Prince Bismarck; a historical biography.
 2v. 1895.....92 B497l
 "Mr. Lowe has studied the sources of information at present available with great care; has arranged and presented the results of his investigation with no little art and skill; and has written not merely a very readable book, but a very creditable history of Bismarck and his times." Nation, 1886.
- Poschinger, Heinrich von, comp. Conversations with Prince Bismarck; English edition ed. by Sidney Whitman. 1900.....92 B497p
 "Herr von Poschinger's official position afforded him unique opportunities for collecting authentic details and many entertaining anecdotes about the Iron Chancellor. Mr. Whitman has made selections for English purposes from five bulky volumes." Saturday review, 1900.
- Smith, Munroe. Bismarck and German unity; a historical outline. 1898.....92 B497s
 "Bismarck literature," p.95-99.
 Covers the entire ground of Bismarck's career and the political influences which surrounded him. As a companion volume to Dr Busch's larger work, it will be found not only useful, but very entertaining, and one who has not the time for the larger work will find the present volume sufficient to give a clear and rational view of the career of the great statesman. Originally published in the New York "Evening post" immediately after Bismarck's death.

 Stoddart, Anna M. John Stuart Blackie; a biography. 2v. 1895.92 B515s
 The author is a warm admirer of the famous Scotchman whom she had special facilities for knowing in all moods and under all circumstances; but this biography is an impartial one, doing full justice to him and at the same time not concealing his limitations and inconsistencies.

Oliphant, Mrs Margaret Oliphant (Wilson). Annals of a publishing house; William Blackwood and his sons, their magazine and friends. 3v. 1897-98.....92 B5170
v.1 and 2, which are all that Mrs Oliphant lived to complete, bring the history of the Blackwood firm down to 1861 and are valuable for the sidelights they throw on the literary history of the period. Of them the London "Athenæum" says: "They form a most interesting record of the doings of a famous publishing house, which has always stood high, not only for the many notable books it has produced, but for the integrity and liberality which have distinguished its dealings with author and public." v.3, "John Blackwood," is by his daughter, Mrs Porter.

BLAINE, James Gillespie.

Hamilton, Gail, (pseud. of Mary Abigail Dodge). Biography of James G. Blaine. 1895.....92 B522h
"This is not in reality a biography at all; it is the history of a family, written by a kinswoman who was practically an inmate of the household...Mr. Blaine has often been compared with Henry Clay, but this biography shows how small was the likeness between them. Both were energetic, magnetic leaders, speakers of the House, secretaries of state, repeatedly disappointed candidates for the presidency. But Clay was a great figure, and filled a great place; while of Blaine the best-intentioned biographer makes out a man genial, kindly, eager, shrewd, renowned, but not extraordinary." A. B. Hart, in American historical review, 1897.

BLAKE, Admiral Robert.

Dixon, William Hepworth. Robert Blake, admiral and general at sea; based on family and state papers. 1852..92 B527d
Blake was among the first to join the parliamentary forces in 1642 and after a notable career on shore was appointed one of the commanders of the fleet, and it was at sea that his greatest reputation was gained. "More even than by his glory and by his success the memory of Blake is dear to the English people by the traditions of his chivalrous character and of his unselfish patriotism." Dictionary of national biography.

Hannay, David. Admiral Blake. 1886. (English worthies.)92 B527h

 Chronological bibliography of the writings of George Borrow, v.2, p.343-375.
 The author of "The Bible in Spain" and "Lavengro" has for the first time a full and authentic biography. After his death in 1881 Professor Knapp, late of Yale, made a collection of his printed books, the magazines that contained his early fugitive pieces, and the articles that discussed him and his works. Eventually he also secured his papers, the correspondence of half a century and more, his manuscripts, and the scattered remains of his library. From this mass of authentic records it now became possible for the first time, to give a full and reliable account of his origin, his early struggles and employments, his later triumphs, his withdrawal from the "trumpetry society of London," and also to explain his disinclination to furnish correct data for his personal history.

BOWLES, Samuel.

Merriam, George Spring. Life and times of Samuel

Bowles. 2v. 1885.....92 B662m

Mr Bowles (1826-78) was editor of the "Springfield republican."

"The first interest of the general public in the career of Samuel Bowles arises from the fact that he was an eminent journalist...his editorial work covered the period from the annexation of Texas to the close of reconstruction under President Hayes...In the struggle which ended in the overthrow of slavery, he was a spectator and actor."

Preface.

BOWNE, Mrs Eliza (Southgate).

A girl's life eighty years ago; selections from [her] letters.

1888.92 B663

Biography, by Clarence Cook, p.3-6.

The same. 1903.....j92 B663

These letters date from 1797 to 1809, forming a record of the life of an American beauty and girl of fashion during that period. They are of interest for their contemporaneous records, their literary merit and the portrait they present of a lovable girl with a striking and individual character.

BOWYER, William.

Nichols, John. Biographical and literary anecdotes of

William Bowyer and his friends. 1782.....qr92 B664n

Bowyer (1699-1777) was an English printer; Nichols was his apprentice and later, his partner. These reminiscences, covering Bowyer's long career as a printer, contain much information regarding the publications which came from his press, anecdotes of his friends, and other literary material.

Boyce. [1898?].....r92 B666i

BOYD, Andrew Kennedy Hutchinson.

Last years of St. Andrews, 1890 to 1895. 1896.....92 B667l

Brings the pleasant familiar record of his life down to the beginning of 1896, three years before his death.

St. Andrews and elsewhere. 1894.....92 B667s

Continuation of Dr Boyd's reminiscences, devoted to "Men and matters ecclesiastical" and "One's real life in the latter years."

Twenty-five years of St. Andrews, 1865 to 1890. 2v. 1892..92 B667

Dr Boyd, author of the well-known "Recreations of a country parson," was minister in the famous old Scottish university town, coming into personal contact with the many distinguished people who every year find their way to that interesting place.

BRACKENRIDGE, Henry Marie.

Recollections of persons and places in the west. 1868....r92 B677

With newspaper clippings and annotations by Judge Veech.

Mr Brackenridge was born in Pittsburgh, and his book includes recollections of the early days of that city as well as of Baltimore, St. Louis and the middle west in the first quarter of the 19th century.

BRADFORD, Andrew.

Jones, Horatio Gates. Andrew Bradford; an address delivered at the meeting of the Historical society of Pennsylvania, Feb. 9th, 1869. 1869.....qr92 B681j

Bradford was the only printer in Pennsylvania from 1712 to 1723. In 1719 he began the publication of the first newspaper printed in the middle states, the "American weekly mercury." It was at his printing office that Benjamin Franklin found employment on arriving in Philadelphia.

BRADSTREET, Mrs Anne (Dudley).

Campbell, Mrs Helen. Anne Bradstreet and her time.

1891.....92 B685c

Mrs Bradstreet (1612-72), wife of one of the early colonial governors of Massachusetts, was a poet whose work was much praised by her

- contemporaries. This volume contains extracts from her poems, and some prose meditations which are more interesting to the modern mind than the poetry.

 Personal recollections. 2v. 1887.....92 B765
 "This life of his was so mixed up with public affairs from beginning to end that it is in fact part of the history of France, and from the early - years of the century to 1832, the point reached by the Recollections, one could hardly read any book giving a better idea of the course of public events... To many people the most interesting part of the Duc de Broglie's book will be his wonderfully spirited account of the Revolution of 1830 of which he was an eyewitness." Spectator, 1887.

- BRONTË, Charlotte, afterward Mrs Nicholls, (pseud. Currer Bell).
- Birrell, Augustine. Life of Charlotte Brontë. 1887. (Great writers.).....92 B7712b
 "Avoiding the amiable prolixity of Mrs. Gaskell and the sententious dogmatism of Mr. Reid, Mr. Birrell has availed himself of all the material before the public, has brought to light a hitherto unpublished chapter in the career of Patrick Brontë, and has offered upon Charlotte Brontë's novels some critical remarks which are characterized by clearness of perception and sound common sense. The book is small in compass, but it covers the field thoroughly; and for its freshness of observation, admirable perspicacity, and charm of style, it is a contribution to critical biography of no slight importance." Literary world, 1887.
- Gaskell, Mrs Elizabeth Cleghorn (Stevenson). Life of Charlotte Brontë. 1895.....92 B7712g

 Haworth edition.
 "Charlotte Brontë was so far fortunate... that her biography was written by the one woman among her contemporaries who had the most genuine fitness for her task." Clement K. Shorter, in preface.
- Harland, Marion, (pseud. of Mrs Mary Virginia (Hawes) Terhune). Charlotte Brontë at home. 1899. (Literary hearthstones.).....92 B7712h
 "In compiling her narrative of the domestic life of the eldest of the Brontë sisters, Mrs. Terhune has drawn on Mr. Shorter's work, from which was omitted nothing of material importance concerning the daily life at Haworth parsonage... Dwells minutely on the details of Charlotte Brontë's daily existence."
- MacKay, Angus Mason. The Brontës, fact and fiction. 1897.92 B771m Consists of two essays, one written to disprove Dr William Wright's theories concerning the Brontës in Ireland. The other is entitled "Fresh light on Brontë biography," and deals mainly with Charlotte Brontë's experience in Brussels and its effect on her character and writings.
- Reid, Sir Thomas Wemyss. Charlotte Brontë. 1877....92 B7712r
 One of the first biographies of Charlotte Brontë to be written after Mrs Gaskell's, it contains some material not available earlier, and deals with circumstances with which Mrs Gaskell could not, writing as she did during the lifetime of Miss Brontë's father.
- Shorter, Clement King. Charlotte Brontë and her circle. 1896.92 B7712s
 "This is not a biography, but a bundle of correspondence," writes Mr. Shorter... The book... owes its value mainly to the material put at the editor's disposal by the Rev. Arthur Bell Nicholls, husband of Charlotte Brontë... by Miss Ellen Nussey, and by the family of the late Mr. W. S. Williams... In these pages Charlotte, and Emily, and Anne appear to live again—more ordinary mortals, perhaps, than those limned by Mrs. Gaskell; not less interesting, perhaps more lovable." Nation, 1896.

 Sister of Charlotte Brontë and author of "Wuthering Heights," etc.
 "The story of her short life, and the delineation of her character and writings, are accomplished with admirable skill by her present biographer. The narrative is infinitely pathetic, with few and faint points of brightness to relieve its sombre color. But it adds a new light to our comprehension of the circumstances environing the inmate of Haworth parsonage." Dial, 1883.

- BROOKS, Phillips, bp.
 Allen, Alexander Viets Griswold. Life and letters of Phillips Brooks. 2v. 1900.....92 B774a
 "Dr. Allen sees the soul behind the man, and enables his reader to share something of his sight. It is this power of vision which gives to this life of Phillips Brooks its peculiar value. And if there was ever a man whose inner life was hard to discern, it was Phillips Brooks; he hid it behind an impenetrable reserve...Nevertheless, Dr. Allen has succeeded in piercing behind this reserve...There is no process of vivisection; no abnormal interest excited in a keen dissection of motives...The impression of Phillips Brooks's real personality steals upon you while you read, as the personality of one of the portraits of Chase or Sargent while you look." Lyman Abbott.

- BROWN, Oliver Madox.
 Ingram, John H. Oliver Madox Brown, 1855-1874. 1883..92 B793i
 Oliver Madox Brown was the son of Ford Madox Brown, the eminent artist, but though he painted several notable pictures his gifts were rather in the direction of letters.
 "Leaving Chatterton out of the question, it would be difficult to recall any other English man of letters who, dying at so early an age (he was not yet twenty), left behind him such remarkable, if fragmentary work." Athenaeum, 1883.
- BROWN, Thomas Edward.
 Letters; ed. with introductory memoir by S. T. Irwin. 2v. 1900.92 B797
 "Letters, apart from their original private use, may be of value...as revealing in obscure writers a personality worth knowing, and otherwise missed by the public. Mr. Brown's letters belong to this... class, for he had no renown except in a small way as a minor poet... He was not fond of the serious vein—in these letters. He preferred dash and sparkle, and talk about Flaubert, or Scott, or his friend Hall Caine, or any of a thousand literary topics, or the hills of Man and its peasants, or...the affairs of his friends." Nation, 1900.

Brummell. 1897. 92 B834b

George, generally known as "Beau" Brummell was for years the absolute ruler of fashion in London, the prince of Wales (later George IV) being his subject in this domain.

"It is his [d'Aureville's] peculiar glory to have written the epic of Dandyism and of Brummel. This masterpiece is more intimately his own than the best of his romances, the fiercest of his criticisms. For not only in his life, but in his art dandyism was a constant obsession . . . and this immortal treatise is the best commentary on his works as on his career." Whibley's Pageantry of life.

"Litteraturnachweis," p.137-143.

Eminent Italian philosopher, 1548-1600. His teachings were opposed to the current philosophic tenets and religious dogmas. From his writings a mass of testimony was collected sufficient to convict him of heresy, and he was burned at the stake by order of the Roman Inquisition.

"Dr. Louis' pamphlet was timed for the tercentenary of that event. It is extremely well written and well arranged, giving in a moderate compass all the essential facts of Bruno's life and thought, as well as a brief review of his influence on posterity and of the bibliography connected with his name." Saturday review, 1900.

BURD, Edward.

Selections from his letters, 1763-1828; ed. by L. B. Walker.

1899. (Burd papers.).....r92 B893

Edward Burd (1751-1833) served as major during the Revolution and was captured by the British in the battle of Long Island. He was prothonotary of the Supreme court of Pennsylvania from 1778 to 1805. The letters are of great interest in connection with Pennsylvania local history.

BURGES, Sir James Bland.

Selections from his letters and correspondence, with notices of his life; ed. by James Hutton. 1885.....r92 B897

"Burgess was not so influential a statesman nor was he so great a poet as he thought himself, but he was associated with many famous men during the last quarter of the 18th century and afterwards, and the mass of correspondence which he left behind him contained quite enough material for an interesting volume." Athenaeum, 1885.

BURKE, Edmund.

Correspondence, 1744-1797; ed. by Earl Fitzwilliam and

Sir Richard Bourke. 4v. 1844.....r92 B916

A large, well-arranged collection of letters. One of the editors was distantly related to the family of Edmund Burke and has supplied the notes to the letters from his personal information.

Morley, John. Burke. [1879.] (English men of letters.).....r92 B916m

A fine analysis and critical study of the great political thinker, his times and his work.

BURLEIGH, William Cecil, baron.

Hume, Martin Andrew Sharp. The great Lord Burghley;

a study in Elizabethan statecraft. 1898.....r92 B921h

"As one of the painstaking editors of the Record Office calendars of Spanish State Papers Major Hume was familiar with much of the material requisite for this life. He also had access to other manuscripts bearing on the Elizabethan period in the Calendars of the Hatfield Papers. The book throws useful light on some points of Elizabethan policy, and brings out clearly, and with many fresh and welcome illustrations, the chief political movements of the times and Cecil's share in guiding and controlling them." Literature, 1898.

BURNEY, Charles.

Arbly, Mme Frances (Burney) d'. Memoirs of Dr Bur-

ney. 1833.....r92 B936a

Charles Burney (1726-1814), Fanny's father, is distinguished as the author of a valuable history of music.

"The book is disfigured by an elaborate affectation of style and is singularly vague in dates; but it contains much interesting matter and many fragments of letters and diaries, full of vivacious description." Dictionary of national biography.

BURNS, Robert, & Dunlop, Mrs F. A. (Wallace).

Correspondence, with elucidations by William Wallace.

2v. 1898.....r92 B939

These volumes contain 96 letters that passed between Burns and Mrs Dunlop in the course of their 10 years' friendship, during the last decade of the life of Burns.

- BURTON, Sir Richard Francis.
 Burton, Isabel (Arundell), lady. Life of Captain Sir Richard F. Burton. 1898.....92 B953b
 Burton was a traveler, orientalist, and writer of bold and original personality, whose life was full of picturesque incident. One of his most interesting adventures was a pilgrimage in disguise to Mecca, described by him in his "Personal narrative of a pilgrimage to Al-Madinah and Meccah."
 "Fault of Lady Burton's presentment is that it is adulatory to the point of absurdity...Full of characteristic anecdotes and opinions about every variety of subject, political, social, religious, spiritualistic, linguistic, and what not...Had they been well written they would have formed one of the most remarkable biographies of the day."
Athenæum, 1893.
- Stisted, Georgiana M. True life of Sir Richard F. Burton. 1897.92 B953s

 "He brings to Dr. Bushnell a reverent admiration, but his attitude toward his thought is never that of the advocate or apologist. It is calmly and kindly judicious... There is no attempt to represent Bushnell as a theological finality. His was the work of liberation, breaking up the 'cake of custom' which had thickened and hardened over the New England orthodox mind."

 v.6. Jan. 1822-Apr. 1824.
 "Sources of the text," v.6, p.459-492.
 v.6 contains an index to the set.
 Contains much new biographical detail and many letters inaccessible to previous biographers and editors.
 "Byron's letters appeal on three special grounds to all lovers of English literature. They offer the most suggestive commentary on his poetry; they give the truest portrait of the man; they possess, at their best, in their ease, freshness and racy vigour, a very high literary value."
Preface.

- Letters, 1804-1813; ed. by W. E. Henley. 1897.....92 B998
 v.1 of an edition of Byron's works which was to have been completed in 12 volumes, but was left unfinished at the time of the editor's death in 1903.
 "These Letters Mr. Henley has annotated as never, surely, were letters annotated before. The Notes provide simply a complete series of little biographies of everyone mentioned in the letters; miniature biographies with such vital selection, such concise completion without dryasdustness, such interest in little, as no other writer but Mr. Henley could compass." Academy, 1896.

 "The most useful, and the most readable, volume upon the Cabots, for the purposes of the general reader. Like every other book devoted to the explorers, it is largely filled up with the original documents, which Mr. Beazley interprets with much care, conservatism and common sense." Larned's Literature of American history.
- Harris, Henry. John Cabot, the discoverer of North America, and Sebastian his son, 1496-1557. 1896. . . .92 C1142h
 "An expansion, in English, of the narrative and argumentative portions of Harris's Jean et Sébastien Cabot. . . The French volume contains the most correct text Mr. Harris could secure of every important document which throws light upon the Cabots, and is the recognized source for reference to these texts. The English volume is a 'laboratory manual, in which the student finds revealed each step of the processes through which the material of history has been forced, in order that it might be made to render up the truth which was contained within it.'" Larned's Literature of American history.

 With annotations by Isaac Craig.
 "One of the earliest American works of serious historical scholarship, and important in the history of historical study and writing in America. A powerful argument advocating the achievements of the son as more important than those of the father; the source from which nearly every article upon Cabot, during the succeeding forty years derived both its inspiration and facts. Many of these facts, and most of the conclusions based upon them, have been overthrown by the discovery of documents unknown to Mr. Biddle." Larned's Literature of American history.

- Froude, James Anthony. Cæsar. 1894.....92 C119fr
 A careful study of "the conversion of the Roman republic into a military empire." Froude, though didactic, is always readable, and the student will from this book obtain a good outline picture of Roman life and conditions at the time of Cæsar.
 "A brilliant and fascinating piece of historical writing, but tainted with Carlylean hero-worship." Larned's History for ready reference.

- Holst, Hermann von. John C. Calhoun. 1894. (American statesmen.)92 C132h
The same. 1899. (American statesmen.).....r92 C132h
 Calhoun was in public life from 1811 to his death in 1850 and as member of Congress, secretary of state, vice-president and United States senator he played an important part in the history of the country.

- Deals chiefly with public relations; valuable as history of the slavery question rather than as personal biography.
- Jenkins, John Stilwell. Life of Calhoun. 1851.....92 C132j
Style is rhetorical, and the author is warm in his praise of Calhoun. Some extracts of speeches and letters are given, and there is a clear statement of Calhoun's position in regard to nullification.

v.2. Essay on the Lusiad of Camoens; translated from the Portuguese of Dom José Maria de Souza.—Some account of the translations of the Lusiad, with notices concerning the translators.—Some account concerning the editions of the works of Camoens.
The most celebrated of Portuguese poets, whose greatest work, the "Lusiad," first printed in 1572, commemorates the exploits of Vasco da Gama and other Portuguese heroes. Of his poems Madame de Staël says, "The national glory of the Portuguese is there illustrated under all the forms that imagination can devise. The versification is so charming and stately that even the common people know them by heart and sing them with delight."

Author was for a long time in Lord Clyde's regiment and on his staff and, while one might wish to hear more of Lord Clyde's early life, the book is always interesting and valuable.
- CAMPBELL, Thomas.
Hadden, James Cuthbert. Thomas Campbell. 1899.
(Famous Scots series.).....92 C161h
"His remarks, taken separately, are just, but he dwells overmuch on Campbell's weaknesses, and the criticism of his poetry, although sensible, is not particularly acute...As we have demurred to much that Mr. Hadden says, it is only fair to add that his monograph is painstaking and accurate." Athenaeum, 1900.

CANNING, Charlotte (Stuart), countess.

- Hare, Augustus John Cuthbert. Story of two noble lives; being memorials of Charlotte, countess Canning and Louisa, marchioness of Waterford. 3v. 1893.....92 C173h
 "The work begins in the third quarter of the eighteenth century...Lady Hardwicke and Lady Stuart de Rothesay, the grandmother and mother of the two beautiful women designated by the title, contribute two... collections of prefatory letters. Lady Hardwicke's husband was Lord Lieutenant of Ireland from 1801 to 1806, and she gives some amusing sketches of Dublin society of that time. Lady Stuart de Rothesay's letters are dated from the English Embassy at Paris, and are rich in reminiscences of men and events...Her daughters, Lady Canning and Lady Waterford, belonged to the second quarter of the century. Mr. Hare gives interesting details of their childhood in France and England and of their marriages. Lady Canning's married life was spent in India during the eventful period of the mutiny, her journal being full of the thrilling scenes there enacted...Lady Waterford spent her long widowhood among her husband's tenants in Ireland. With many domestic details are anecdotes and recollections of some famous people."

 "A pathetic and instructive record of the private history of a woman who will henceforth be remembered and honoured, not only or chiefly because she was the wife of a man of genius, but on account of her own virtues and talents...The humour and the pungent wit, the delicious naïveté, and the power of expressing spontaneous thoughts, grave and gay, in choice language...make at least a hundred...letters worth preserving as choice specimens of letter-writing apart altogether from their personal interest." Athenæum, 1883.

CARLYLE, Thomas.

- Early letters, 1814-1826; ed. by C. E. Norton. 1886.....92 C214e
 "Mr. Norton is one of the many outsiders to whom 'the view of Mr. Carlyle's character presented in Mr. Froude's biography has not approved itself,' and he endeavors to correct that view by printing selections from the letters written by Carlyle himself." Athenæum, 1886.
 Letters of Carlyle to his youngest sister; ed. by C. T. Cope-land. 1899.....92 C214f
 The letters printed in this volume were mainly written by Thomas Carlyle to his youngest sister, Mrs Robert Hanning, who died in Toronto Dec. 13, 1897. Other members of the family are represented in the correspondence; there are a few letters—these perhaps the most interesting—from Carlyle to his mother; a few, also, from the mother to her oldest and to her youngest child. The collection extends from

- 1832 to 1890. Mr Copeland's introductory essay is on "Carlyle as a letter-writer."
- CARLYLE, Thomas, & Emerson, R. W.
Correspondence. 2v. 1888.....92 C214
"Not so much a correspondence in any true intellectual sense as a deliberate exchange of monologues...Emerson's nature, on the whole, comes out of this correspondence the more disinterested, saner, and wiser, though not the stronger and grander of the two." Spectator, 1883.

Froude was Carlyle's intimate friend and literary executor, but his biography has been bitterly criticized for its ruthless frankness, and its accuracy denied by those in a position to know the facts.
- Garnett, Richard. Life of Thomas Carlyle. 1887. (Great writers.)92 C214g
Bibliography, apx. p.1-28.
"Mr. Garnett has given a singularly good account of Carlyle, man and work...We do not know that anything important...in Carlyle's biography is here omitted, while his successive works meet with criticism which is more or less sympathetic and discriminating. Mr. Garnett is most emphatically right in insisting on the altogether incalculable importance of Carlyle as an ethical influence on the last half of the nineteenth century." Saturday review, 1887.

- CELLINI, Benvenuto.
 Life; newly tr. into English by J. A. Symonds. 1899.....92 C315l Contains an introduction by Symonds which gives a good character sketch of Cellini.
 "Those who have made themselves thoroughly familiar with Cellini's Memoirs possess the substance of that many-sided epoch [the 16th century] in the form of an epitome. It is the first book which a student of

- the Italian Renaissance should handle in order to obtain the right direction for his more minute researches...From the pages of this book the Genius of the Renaissance, incarnate in a single personality, leans forth and speaks to us. He was the first goldsmith of his time, an adequate sculptor, a restless traveller, an indefatigable workman, a Bohemian of the purest water, a turbulent bravo, a courtier and companion of princes; finally, a Florentine who used his native idiom with incomparable vivacity of style." J. A. Symonds.
- "One of the most interesting and valuable autobiographies ever written. The author was contemporaneous with Raphael and Michael Angelo, and was the most skilful worker in metals in that age of artists. It was while he was engaged in the varied labors of his craft that he dictated this fascinating work. The variety of its incidents, the minuteness of its descriptions, the pictures of the people, and of the manners of the time, and, above all, the view it affords of the life of one of the most powerful characters of the age, give it at once the charm of romance and the value of a record of contemporaneous events." C. K. Adams.

- Mayans y Siscar, Gregorio. Life of Michael de Cervantes Saavedra; tr. fr. the Spanish by Mr Ozell. 1738....q92 C334m
- Contains a number of prints illustrating Don Quixote.
One of the four biographies of the famous Spanish novelist, author of Don Quixote, mentioned in Ticknor's "History of Spanish literature." He characterizes it as a "work of learning, and the first proper attempt to collect materials for a life of Cervantes, but ill-arranged and ill-written, and of little value now, except for some of its incidental discussions."
- Oliphant, Mrs Margaret Oliphant (Wilson). Cervantes. [1880.]92 C334o

to have detected the remedy, and girded himself, in all his strength, to apply it." Dictionary of national biography.

CHAMBERLAIN, Joseph.

Jeyes, Samuel Henry. Right Hon. Joseph Chamberlain.

(Public men of to-day.).....92 C355j

Brief account of the public career of "the best abused man in England," to quote Mr Chamberlain's own description of his position in public life.

The last chapter, "Mr Chamberlain the imperialist," includes a brief account of Dr Jameson's expedition in the Transvaal.

CHAMBERS, George.

Sharpe, John McDowell. Memoir of George Chambers of

Chambersburg. 1873.....r92 C355s

Read before the Historical society of Pennsylvania, Feb. 17th, 1873.

Eminent Pennsylvania jurist, member of the convention that formed the present constitution of Pennsylvania, was made a judge of the supreme court of his state in 1851. A manuscript history of a considerable portion of Pennsylvania, which he had written for the Pennsylvania historical society was destroyed when the Confederates burned Chambersburg in 1864.

CHAMPLAIN, Samuel de.

Sedgwick, Henry Dwight. Samuel de Champlain. 1902..92 C358s

Being written for young people the biography does not refer to original sources or discuss at length questions of policy. It dwells particularly on Champlain's life in France and presents his nobility of character.

two nations. 1900. (Heroes of the nations.).....92 C374d

"I have endeavored to give some idea of the first western Emperor's personality and influence upon European history. I have limited myself, in dealing with institutions and social and literary developments, to those facts which seemed to throw light on his career. I have throughout based my narrative on a study of the chronicles, diplomata, and literature of the period." Preface.

Hodgkin, Thomas. Charles the Great. 1897. (Foreign statesmen.).....92 C374h

The author prefaces his history of Charlemagne by a study of his predecessors and the conditions of the time, and in the last chapter gives a brief summary of the effect of his rule on the political condition of Europe, on literature, on laws and on the western church.

- Mombert, Jacob Isidor. History of Charles the Great.
1888.92 C374m
"As a record of events...an admirable piece of work. Scarcely a single fact has escaped his notice, and he has entered far more minutely into several of the affairs of Charles's reign than any other historian who has written in English...He has not attempted to define the place which his hero holds in the history of the world, or to trace the effects of his conquests and general policy on the fortunes of the peoples included in his Empire." Saturday review, 1889.

"Disraeli's point of view is that of a High Tory, and it is probably the most powerful plea ever made in behalf of Charles I. But, notwithstanding the ardor of its advocacy, it is temperate in language and dignified in tone. The greatest value of the volumes is not so much in the new evidence brought to light, though new evidence is not wanting, as in the ingenuity with which known facts are woven into the argument and made to support his cause." *C.  "The author has thought for himself, and draws his own picture of Cicero and his times without making either a servile copy from other authorities or a fantastic caricature in defiance of them...Especially worthy of commendation is the clear statement of the relations of the different orders in the later Commonwealths." Nation, 1894.

- Trollope, Anthony. Life of Cicero. 2v. [1881.].....92 C475t
 "An exceedingly vivid portrayal of the life of the great orator. No one of the numerous biographers of Cicero has succeeded so completely in transplanting him and his surroundings into our own days... While Mommsen, Froude, Merivale, and others have looked at the condition and the necessities of the State, and have censured Cicero for not comprehending the nature of the situation, Trollope had studied the problem with a view to ascertaining and showing how it must have appeared to Cicero himself. The object of the series is to present "a study of the career of some conspicuous personage in each nationality," and to the author (an Englishman) it seemed in 1896, when the book was written, that there was no American then living who had played so distinguished a part, and at the same time had so strong a personality, as the then president of the United States.

"The most important part of the book is the Private canal journey, 1810, which is the diary of a journey through New York between Schenectady and Buffalo, and contains considerable historic and economic information gathered while the country was still in a primitive state. Helpful data will be found here in regard to wages, prices, value of land and local products. Clinton was afterwards an ardent supporter of the construction of the Erie Canal." Larned's Literature of American history.

 Cobbett (1762-1835) was an English essayist, politician and agriculturist. "Cobbett if not an attractive character, is a very interesting one, and the active part taken by him in all the public events and controversies of an important period makes him well worth knowing to all who are students of that period. For this purpose Mr. Waters's life is well suited...He has had the good sense, too, to let Cobbett tell his own story for the most part, an easy thing in so voluminous and egotistical a writer, and a very desirable thing in a writer so racy and entertaining." Nation, 1883.

- Letters; ed. with introduction by W. Benham. 1899.....92 C849l
 "Two men of mark in English literature, Southey and Alexander Smith, have called Cowper 'the best of English letter-writers,' and few will be found to challenge this opinion. The charm of Cowper's letters, like that of his poetry, lies first of all in his naturalness and sincerity. He writes simply because he had something to say, or because he loves his correspondent, and has no idea of posing for effect...His letters, then, are the simple statement of whatever he has in his mind; written in pure and beautiful English; full of the information and refined taste of a well-read man; overflowing now with humour, now with deep religious feeling." Introduction.

The same. 1898.....j92 C886a
 Crockett was elected to the Tennessee legislature in 1821, when he had never read a newspaper and was entirely ignorant of public speaking; served three terms in Congress, where he was noted for his strong common sense, as well as his eccentricity of manner; joined in the Texan struggle for independence, and lost his life in the famous defence of the Alamo. This biography is a popular one for young people, written many years ago.

 American pioneer, hunter and politician, killed at Fort Alamo, Texas in 1836.

CROKER, Richard.

Lewis, Alfred Henry, (pseud. Dan Quin). Richard Croker. 1901.92 C889l
 "Though a good deal of the life history of his hero is imbedded in the pages of Mr. Lewis's extraordinary book, it is not so much a biography as the vindication of a system [Tammany]...The account...of the personality of the great Tammany chief is extremely engaging...the book as a whole is full of curious entertainment." Spectator, 1901.

The same. 1899.....r92 C892cz

Finding the existing historical treatment of Cromwell typified by the extreme severity of Hume, or the equally unfair hero-worship of Carlyle, Mr Church began a serious study of the man and his time, and the result is this book, which he does not consider a biography, but "as an adequate narrative which aims to present, with sufficient detail, the formation of the Commonwealth and its strange paradox of the permanent establishment of civil and religious liberty through a Dictator who respected no law, in working out England's salvation, but the law of necessity; and this for a nation whose fortunes are happily and inseparably linked with the forms of popular monarchy."

Firth, Charles Harding. Oliver Cromwell and the rule of the Puritans in England. 1900. (Heroes of the nations.)92 C892f

While based on an article contributed by the author to the "Dictionary of national biography" in 1888, this life embodies the result of later researches and of recently discovered documents such as the Clarke papers. The battle plans have been specially drawn for this volume by B. V. Darbishire and in two cases differ considerably from those generally accepted as correct.

Gardiner, Samuel Rawson. Oliver Cromwell. 1899....qr92 C892g

"A cautious, moderate and unpartisan estimate...A truly marvellous picture of Cromwell." Spectator, 1899.

"From a literary point of view, Mr. Gardiner has never done anything so good. As an artistic whole, the arrangement, the subordination of details to the general effect, the breadth and skill of the treatment, are worthy of a great historian." Literature, 1899.

Beautifully illustrated with reproductions of portraits, busts, medals, seals and miniatures pertaining to Cromwell and his family.

Harrison, Frederic. Oliver Cromwell. 1894. (Twelve English statesmen.).....92 C892h

"Popular' in the good, not in the bad sense of that term. It tells ordinary readers the facts which men who are not historians, but who care for history, want to know about the Protector, and it tells these facts in a style which is clear, striking, and unaffected." Nation, 1888.

Horton, Robert Forman. Oliver Cromwell; a study in personal religion. 1897.....92 C892ho

Believing that the Puritan creed was the central idea of Cromwell's life and that no biographer has been in sufficient sympathy with this idea to exhibit his career properly, Dr Horton has considered it entirely from this point of view.

Morley, John. Oliver Cromwell. 1900.....92 C892m

Appeared in the "Century magazine," v.59-60, Nov. 1899-Oct. 1900.
"Not a biography, but an 'appreciation' of the Protector...Mr. Morley...unites the character of the man of letters...with the character of a statesman who has played a leading part in English public life...The book does not...explain the paradox of Puritanism...It does not give a picture of Cromwell, but it suggests peculiarities in his character which go far to explain his failure in every attempt to construct a system which should outlast his own life." Nation, 1901.

Paterson, Arthur Henry. Oliver Cromwell; his life and character. 1899.....92 C892pa

"The object of this book is to give a narrative of the personal life, aims, and motives of this great Englishman; any history of the time has been studiously avoided. Cromwell, and Cromwell alone, with what Cromwell did, and tried to do, and was—this is the theme."
Preface.

- Tangye, Sir Richard. The two protectors, Oliver and Richard Cromwell. 1899.....92 C892t
 Authorities consulted, p.16.
 "Of no little interest to all lovers of Cromwell, and to all students of the Commonwealth period. It is not a history or Life of Cromwell or his son, but rather a series of reproductions of Cromwell pictures and Cromwell relics with a certain amount of explanatory comment. Sir Richard Tangye appears to have a large and valuable collection of pictures and other objects connected with the Protector, and it is from his own collection that most of these pictures are drawn." Spectator, 1899.
- CROMWELL, Richard.
Guizot, François Pierre Guillaume. History of Richard Cromwell and the restoration of Charles II. 2v. 1856...92 C8922g
 "A philosophical study rather than a history...Chief value lies in the mass of illustrative letters printed in the Appendices. Considerably more than half the work is filled with these letters, drawn from foreign archives, and some of them are of extreme importance...Cardinal Mazarin was one of the coolest and cleverest of the many spectators of events in England, and the letters of his diplomatic agent, M. de Bordeaux, are deeply interesting." Athenæum, 1856.

- CROWE, Sir Joseph Archer.
 Reminiscences of thirty-five years of my life. 1895.....92 C896
 An account of his life to the time when he entered the public service, and a most interesting life it was, passed by turns in London, on the continent, in India. He was war correspondent on the Danube in '54, in the Crimea, in Bombay during the mutiny, in the Franco-Austrian war in '59. Not the least interesting part of the book is his account of the circumstances under which he wrote in collaboration with Cavalcaselle the history of the early Flemish painters.
- CROZIER, John Beattie.
 My inner life; a chapter in personal evolution and autobiography. 1898.....92 C896z
 "Mr. Crozier is known to English readers as one of the most versatile and original thinkers of the day, and there is nothing which he is disposed to say which is not, at least, interesting and suggestive. This work...is a curious blend of biography, incident, and inward growth, together with much acute criticism on the history of philosophy, and on some of the leading writers of our time. The object of the work is to reveal the various forces which played on an exceedingly active and serious mind." Spectator, 1899.

CUNNINGHAM, William, of Fitchburg, Mass., & Adams,
John, 1735-1826.

Correspondence, beginning in 1803 and ending in 1812.

1823.qr92 A214

Written by the ex-president to a relative shortly after being defeated for re-election. They were under the seal of the strictest confidence and dealt with the chief actors and events in the latter part of his public life. They were vehement, abusive and unjust. Mr C. F. Adams says that an heir of Cunningham gave them to the opponents of John Quincy Adams to be used against him when he was a candidate for the presidency. It was a great mistake upon Adams's part that he wrote them and a grave misfortune that they were published, even though dishonorably and many years afterward.

CURRAN, John Philpot.

Curran, William Henry. Life of John Philpot Curran.

1855.92 C931c

Irish patriot and orator (1750-1817). His wit and conversational powers were so brilliant that they almost eclipsed his reputation as an advocate and statesman.

The editor of this American edition of his Life by his son has introduced a large quantity of new matter relating principally to his legislative and personal life.

CURTIN, Andrew Gregg.

Egle, William Henry, ed. Andrew Gregg Curtin; his life and services. 1895.92 C932e

Andrew Curtin (1815-94) was the famous "war governor of Pennsylvania." This biography consists of independent chapters on different periods and phases of Curtin's life, written by men closely associated with him.

CURTIS, George William.

Early letters to John S. Dwight; Brook Farm and Concord; ed. by G. W. Cooke. 1898.92 C934

"Mr. Cooke has studied Emerson and others of the Concord set so carefully that he is well prepared to edit the letters which he now presents to us...Taken in their entirety, the letters are a fine disclosure of the working of Transcendentalism in a singularly ardent and ingenuous youth." Nation, 1898.

Cary, Edward. George William Curtis. 1895. (American men of letters.)92 C934c

The author being himself a political journalist his comment and criticism on Mr Curtis's connection with "Harper's weekly," with civil service reform, with state and national politics is particularly valuable, while his judgments of the purely literary work are frank and discriminating. Of Mr Curtis's more personal and private life Mr Cary has written briefly, but with excellent taste.

"Taking his book as a whole, those must have known Mr. Curtis extremely long and well whose good opinion of him is not enhanced by this entirely simple and sincere portrayal of his character and career." Nation, 1895.

 Biographical sketch of John Cuthbertson, the first Reformed Presbyterian minister in America, 1751-1791.
 [Anonymous.] 1878.....92 C948b
 For many years after coming over from Scotland in 1751, Mr Cuthbertson did missionary duty in various parts of Pennsylvania, though his principal congregations were at Octoraro, Lancaster county, and Lower Chanceford, York county. The facts of this work are taken from his diary and from details given by old people in the places where he worked.
- CUTLER, Ephraim.
 Life and times; prepared from his journals and correspondence. 1890.....r92 C949I Contains a biographical sketch of W. P. Cutler.
 Ephraim Cutler (1767-1853) was the son of Manasseh Cutler of the "Ohio company" and naturally turned westward with the other early emigrants. He rendered important service in the convention that framed the Ohio state constitution, and in the territorial legislature, and led the hard life of a frontiersman. The book contains also a short memoir of Jervis Cutler, one of Putnam's band of pioneers who began the settlement of Ohio in 1788.

Earliest lives of Dante; tr. fr. the Italian by J. R. Smith.
1901. (Yale studies in English, v.10.)...92 D237bo
Of the biography by Boccaccio, Scartazzini in his "Companion to Dante" says: "Though doubtless well intended and a fine monument of literature, valuable too, indeed indispensable, for the historic study of Dante, [it] has to be used with the greatest caution." The same author says of Bruni's work: "One of the most important among the old biographies of Dante, and his statements always deserve to be taken into consideration."
- Browning, Oscar. Dante; his life and writings. 1891...92 D237b

- Plumptre, Edward Hayes, dean. Life of Dante; ed. by A.
J. Butler. 1900...92 D237p
New edition of the work which appeared in 1886, the editor having pruned, he says, "a little of the somewhat exuberant conjecture in which the Dean, after the fashion of an earlier school of biographers, was apt to indulge." In spite of this tendency, the book has both value and interest and the advantage of compactness, covering less than 250 small pages of good-sized print.
- Toynbee, Paget. Dante Alighieri. 1900...92 D237t

Belloc, Hilaire. Danton; a study. 1899.....92 D238b

The first biography in English of the great French revolutionary leader, founded on original documents. Mr Belloc, late scholar of Balliol college, Oxford, deals only with known facts—facts that may be proved; he has painted a vivid and true picture of Danton and described the character of the period in which he was a central figure. Stephen Decatur was the most conspicuous figure in the naval history of the United States for the hundred years between Paul Jones and Farragut. For an accurate presentation of his life the author has drawn freely upon all available sources of information, including many manuscripts, letters, and other interesting matter in the possession of Decatur's descendants and in the library of the Historical society of Pennsylvania.
Author is a graduate of the Naval academy at Annapolis, and, previous to his taking orders in the church, served in the navy.

Autobiography and correspondence, with interesting reminiscences of George III and Queen Charlotte. 3v. 1861..r92 D389
Mrs Delany was a great favorite of George III and the royal family, and had many interesting friends, but is best known from her connection with Fanny Burney. Part of the letters describe life in Ireland, 1743-68.
- Symonds, E. M. (pseud. George Paston), comp. Mrs Delany (Mary Granville); a memoir, 1700-1788. 1900.....r92 D389s
"There is every reason why, in her reincarnation in one volume, abridged and intelligently edited, so vivacious a lady should win a new lease of life. Her lively journal of the court and social life of a century so dull is worth reading, if only for the light it throws on the minor antiquities of dress and manners, and for the curious pieces of gossip that only a clever woman knows how to retail." Nation, 1900.

DERBY, Edward Geoffrey Smith Stanley, earl of.

British Tory statesman of the middle 19th century, premier in 1852, 1858-59 and 1866-68.

"A forcible, compact, yet, space considered, fairly thorough review, from the Tory standpoint, of Lord Derby's public career, with the due infusion of characteristic anecdote and personal detail. . . He sketches rapidly and sympathetically. . . the salient events of Lord Derby's political life, his part in fighting the Reform Question, his attitude towards the Corn Law agitation, his first, second and third ministries. . . Lord Derby's connection with the turf is not forgotten." Dial, 1892.

Account of his life with an estimate of his writings.

DES ÉCHEROLLES, Alexandrine.

French by M. C. Balfour. 1900.92 D458

"It is a tale of personal vicissitude, wholly devoid of political character or literary association, and dependent for its success on the ingredients of peril and unexpected escape. . . The siege of Lyons is an episode of some moment in the history of the Revolution, and it fills the chief place among the historical events which are described by Mlle. des Echerolles. After the troops of the Convention had entered the conquered city M. des Echerolles was condemned, and escaped only after he had survived some remarkable dangers. . . Her reminiscences create a pleasant impression by their simplicity of tone, while the amount of domestic detail which they furnish places them in the class of historical materials." Nation, 1900.

DESMOULINS, Camille.

- Claretie, Arsène Arnaud, called Jules. Camille Desmoulins and his wife; passages from the history of the Dantonists. 1876.....r92 D468c
 "No man in himself ever personified the people better than did Camille Desmoulins [1760-94]...He not only aped the people, he was the people himself. His newspapers cried in the public streets, and their sarcasm, bandied from mouth to mouth, has not been swept away with the other impurities of the day...It was the popular chorus which led the people to their most important movements." Lamartine's Girondists.

DE SOTO, Hernando. See SOTO, Hernando de.

DE VERE, Aubrey Thomas.

- Recollections. 1897.....92 D487
 Contains a chapter on Cardinal Newman and one on Cardinal Manning. "Recollections" and "Autobiographies" are very different things; and this book belongs to the former class, not to the latter. We have seen persons and places which have amused or interested us, and it occurs to us that if accurately described they might amuse or interest others also; but this is a very different thing from writing one's biography, with which the world has little concern." Preface.

- Morley, John. Diderot and the encyclopædists. 2v. 1886-91.92 D562m
 "The biography of the chief founder and conductor of the Encyclopædia is not, in Mr. Morley's hands, a mere peg on which to hang a dissertation, but is set before us as an example of what Encyclopædists were. Treated in this way, the life of Diderot has a value which it could not have otherwise." Saturday review, 1878.

- Longueville, Thomas. Life of Sir Kenelm Digby, by one of his descendants. 1896.....92 D5771
 "Were it for nothing else than the picturesqueness and versatility of the man, Kenelm Digby would have been a notable figure at the court of King Charles. He had laid it out for himself to combine the roles in life of the philosopher, the fine gentleman, and the man of affairs, and he attacked his difficult problem with astonishing audacity, and on the whole, astonishing success... His life is pretty reading and we are in debt to the descendant signing himself, T. L., who has put it together for us." Academy, 1896.

DINGELSTEDT, Franz von.

Münchener bilderbogen. 1879.....92 D613

Dingelstedt (1814-81) was a German poet and dramatist, and stage director of the National theatre at Munich. His autobiography relates to his Munich experiences.

DIX, Dorothea Lynde.

Tiffany, Francis. Life of Dorothea Lynde Dix. 1892....92 D647t

The life of Dorothea Dix was devoted to work in behalf of paupers, prisoners and the insane. Her campaigns for reform won almost single-handed, her victories over the ignorance and indifference of legislatures, at home and abroad, form an unusually interesting story.

DOLET, Étienne.

Christie, Richard Copley. Étienne Dolet, the martyr of the renaissance, 1508-1546. 1899.....92 D694c

List of books written or published by Dolet, p.513-553.

First edition appeared in 1880.

"Such memory of Dolet as survives is the exclusive possession of the bibliophile or the scholar. To the former he is known as one of those erudite printers who have placed Lyons in typographical art by the side of Venice or Florence, or in subsequent times Amsterdam. The latter has gleaned some scanty particulars concerning one who was the friend and the publisher of Marot and Rabelais, the pupil of Villanovanus, the ally of Bonaventure Despériers, the opponent of Erasmus, and the antagonist of Scaliger... It is pleasant to think that an Englishman has been the first to drag to light such particulars concerning Dolet as may yet be found, and to supply a biography that must rank as adequate." Athenæum, 1880.

DONNE, John.

Gosse, Edmund William. Life and letters of John Donne, dean of St. Paul's. 2v. 1899.....92 D728g

"Mr. Gosse's subtle and solid study of John Donne justifies expectation... It is a brilliant portrait: it is also a laborious and exact work of literary history... Apart from Walton... Mr. Gosse has found his chief mine of biographical matter in Donne's own works—the poems, so far as they can be dated, and the letters... These [letters] have been digested, set as far as possible in chronological order, and incorporated in the text of the compiler's narrative." Athenæum, 1899.

Jessopp, Augustus. John Donne, sometime dean of St.

Paul's, 1621-1631. 1897.....92 D728je

"It will not have been Dr. Jessopp's fault if the world does not begin to understand Donne's greatness as a preacher and a Churchman... Dr. Jessopp is an enthusiast, a Donne worshipper; but even if he does not always persuade us to take quite his view, he never fails to make his subject attractive." Spectator, 1897.

- Brown, William Garrott. Stephen Arnold Douglas. 1902..92 D759b
 "Notable as a recognition of the great part that Douglas really played
 ...The criticism that suggests itself respects the scope rather than the form of the book. It is too mature for younger readers and too meager for older ones." American historical review, 1903.
 Sheahan, James W. Life of Stephen A. Douglas. 1860....92 D759s Extremely eulogistic sketch written to secure for him the presidential nomination of 1860.

DOUGLASS, Frederick.

 "For thirty years his life was a continuous record of lighthouse erection, design, and improvement, not only on the English coast, but also on the Great and Little Basses reefs...The Eddystone Lighthouse...has always been regarded as the chief monument of his engineering skill."
Athenaeum, 1900.

DOW, Lorenzo.

- History of Cosmopolite; experience and travels in Europe and America, also polemic writings, to which is added the Journey of life, by Peggy Dow. 1850.....92 D767 Methodist minister (1777-1834) who preached in New England and the South, and visited Ireland feeling a divine call to preach to the Catholics, and England, where he introduced camp-meetings, and was the means of the organization of the sect of the Primitive Methodists.

DREW, Mrs Louisa (Lane).

- Autobiographical sketch, with an introduction by her son,
 John Drew, and biographical notes by Douglas Taylor.
 1899.92 D821
 "Little more than a bare outline of Mrs. Drew's professional career, with dates of her different engagements, the names of the characters in which she appeared, and the briefest references to the many distinguished players with whom she was associated at different times...
 Nevertheless, the book is worth reading as an illustration of the sort of apprenticeship which the really skilled actors of the past were compelled to serve, and is rendered additionally attractive by a number of excellent portraits." Nation, 1899.

DREXEL, Anthony Joseph.

Drexel institute, Philadelphia. Service in memory of Anthony J. Drexel, founder of Drexel institute, held Jan. 20, 1894. 1896.....92 D822d
The memorial address was by Bishop Potter.

DREYFUS, Alfred.

Five years of my life, 1894-1899. 1901.....92 D823f
Covers the time of his captivity on Devil's island.

"Almost entirely confined to extracts from the letters of Capt. Dreyfus to his wife and of Madame Dreyfus to her husband...Carefully excludes everything which bears upon what is known as 'the case' itself." Athenæum, 1901.

Letters of Captain Dreyfus to his wife. 1899.....92 D823

Cover the period from Dec. 5, 1894, to Feb. 14, 1898, and contain the only defense which Dreyfus has made refuting the calumny that his married life was not what it should have been. They are dated from the prisons of Cherche-Midi and La Santé, from Saint Martin de Ré, and from Devil's island. There is an introduction, summing up the Dreyfus case, by Walter Littlefield.

Barlow, George. History of the Dreyfus case, from the arrest of Captain Dreyfus, Oct. 1894 up to the flight of Esterhazy in Sept. 1898. 1899.....92 D823b

The author firmly believes in the innocence of both Dreyfus and Picquart, shows the entire improbability that Dreyfus ever made any confession of guilt, pays a high tribute to M. Zola and condemns the conduct of M. Cavaignac.

"Most thorough and conscientious study of his writings. Every scrap of them that has been preserved to us seems to have been deciphered—letters and journals and notes written upon the margins of drawings, as well as his professed treatises upon art and engineering—and the whole collated and compared with scrupulous care in the effort to throw some new light upon his nature, his ideas, and his methods of work. The result is almost altogether admirable." Nation, 1890.

"Authorities," p.7-10.

"Catalogue of Dürer's works," p.220-315.

"The account of the life and works of Dürer occupies only 193 small pages of large print. It is a vigorous and sympathetic biography of a great artist, who was also a worthy man and who lived a somewhat eventful life. It includes long extracts from the journal which Dürer kept during his journey to the Netherlands...For the general reader, not specially occupied with German art or with print collecting, this is the best life of Dürer." Russell Sturgis, 1897.

Cooke, George Willis. John Sullivan Dwight, Brook-

Farmer, editor and critic of music; a biography. 1898..92 D977c

"He knew most of the choice spirits of his time, and enjoyed both their esteem and their love. The story of his life is thus deeply rooted in all that was noblest and best in mid-century New England, and the associations evoked by its pages are indeed various. This extra-musical interest is so great that the book will find as many readers among those who do not care for the art...as among those who do." Dial, 1899.

Taneyhill, Richard Henry. Leatherwood god; an account of the appearance and pretensions of Joseph C. Dylks in eastern Ohio in 1828. 1870. (Ohio valley historical series.).....r977 E84

"A very curious and interesting account of the achievements of Joseph C. Dylks, who appeared for the first time, no one knew how or whence, at a meeting of the Ohio Methodists in the open air; he laid claim to extraordinary physical and spiritual powers...The delusion of which it treats, is extraordinary in its nature, and the story is instructive and significant, as an example of the credulity of a comparatively educated and intelligent people." Thomson's Bibliography of Ohio.

EASTLAKE, Elizabeth (Rigby), lady.

Journals and correspondence. 2v. 1895.....92 E184

"Lady Eastlake (1809-93) wrote much about literature and art, and expressed in her journals and letters many opinions on politics. Time has changed many of her judgments; yet they are still worth attention. She was a woman of great ability and much culture; she lived among well-born, clever, and well-informed people." Spectator, 1896.

Narrative dictated by Eastwick (1772-1865) in his blind old age.

"He went to sea as an apprentice in the whaling trade...had a brief experience of a man-of-war as a pressed man; sailed much in the East Indies, both for the Company and private employers...was a prisoner on board the Forte when she was captured by the Sybilie in the famous night action; he made and lost several fortunes in those days of war freights and French privateers, was in several shipwrecks, saw the mutiny of the Irish political convicts at Sydney." Saturday review, 1891.

EBERS, Georg.

Die geschichte meines lebens. 1893.....92 E218g

Story of my life. 1893.....92 E218

Born in Berlin in 1837, Dr Ebers has become well known as a novelist and Egyptologist, both in his own country and among English-speaking people. His autobiography, which closes with the completion of his first novel, gives a touching retrospect of his childhood, an account of his gymnasium and university career, and a description of the famous Keilhau school (founded by Froebel), its methods and ideals. There is much incidental portraiture and entertaining reminiscence.

"The history of Edward III. is practically that of England for half a century and embraces that of Scotland, France, the Low Countries, and Spain, in a more limited degree. The work is, therefore, more than a biography; it is a history of an important and dramatic epoch, as influenced and overshadowed by the extraordinary man who was the motive power of the activity of his age." Preface.
- EDWARD VII, king of England.
Belloc, Marie Adelaide, afterward Mrs Lowndes. H. R. H. the prince of Wales; and account of his career. 1898. . . . 92 E3133l

Anglo-French reminiscences, 1875-1899. 1900. 92 E3182a
"Has studied France long and sympathetically, and writes well of what she has seen; but her pages are pervaded by a vehement spirit of religious animosity. . . Her picture of Gambetta, whom she twice heard address a meeting, is striking. But the more interesting things are her detailed accounts of less famous persons, of M. Guépin of Nantes, a colleague in 1830 of Ledru-Rollin and Louis Blanc, a pioneer of democracy among the Bretons. . . and of Mr. Holden, the English Wes-

- leyan manufacturer of Reims, to whom after the war of 1870 was unanimously voted the Legion of Honour... But the most interesting thing of all in the book is the study of the French soldier." Spectator, 1900.

- ELIZABETH AMÉLIE EUGÉNIE, empress of Austria.
 [Owen, Mrs Marguerite (du Plantz) Cunliffe-.] Martyrdom of an empress [Elizabeth of Austria]. 1899.....92 E48520
 The writer is violently prejudiced in favor of the empress and blind to the fact that her misguided eulogies but strengthen the conclusion she so earnestly seeks to deny,—that all Elizabeth's troubles were indirectly of her own making. In seeking to vindicate Elizabeth's character she libels the emperor and other distinguished people. Like many other books which would have been better unwritten, this volume throws a good deal of light upon history and, in the main, is doubtless genuine, though often misleading and inaccurate.

Herbert of Cherbury, Edward Herbert, baron. Lives of Lord Herbert of Cherbury and Thomas Ellwood, with essays by W. D. Howells. 1877. (Autobiographic series.) 92 H461

"The autobiography of Lord Herbert is of a style so charming, and of a manner and matter so singularly characteristic of his order, age, and nation, that one might easily believe it written by some skilful student of the period. . . As you read, you cannot help thinking. . . that Thackeray himself could not have done it better, if he had been minded to portray a gentleman of the first James's time. Yet this picture, so frank, so boldly colored, so full of the very life of a young English noble, is one of the most remarkable instances of self-portraiture in any language. . . A rare sincerity marks the whole memoir, and gives it the grace of an antique simplicity. . . Herbert, not only as James's ambassador to Louis XIII., but as a sort of soldier of fortune in the Low Countries,

- and a peaceful traveller in Italy, saw everything that was best worth seeing in the Europe of his day." W. D. Howells, in introduction.

The inclusion of Erasmus among the 'Heroes of the Reformation' he holds to be justified not merely on account of the great scholar's 'heroism of persistent work and cheerful endurance,' but of his immense services in preparing the way for reform by illuminating and unlocking the sources of Christian thought, by insistence 'upon the principle of a sound, sane, reasonable, individual judgment,' and by a sense of the 'essential rightness of what is natural.'" Nation, 1899.

"We have now the whole correspondence brought together chronologically, the letters being left intact as originally written, and made more valuable by a most complete series of explanatory notes giving references to the papers alluded to, as well as short biographical notices of people mentioned in the correspondence. The care and trouble which has been bestowed upon this most essential adjunct to a set of letters containing references to memoirs which for us represent the scientific literature of a former generation, has thus resulted in a distinct contribution to the history of science, and the editors have laid all workers in the domains of physics and chemistry under a debt of obligation." Nature, 1900.

Farragut, Loyall. Life of David Glasgow Farragut. 1891..92 F248f

"Largely composed of the journal kept by the admiral himself and of his letters...The story of Farragut's early life, the letters to his family, and the revelations of character make the book a marked one in literature." Nation, 1880.

Mahan, Capt. Alfred Thayer. Admiral Farragut. 1893.

(Great commanders.).....92 F248m

"Ideal piece of brief biography. The subject is excellent, the author perfectly adapted in every way to treat it, and the treatment itself well calculated to inspire interest and just admiration for the subject."

Larned's Literature of American history.

FAWCETT, Henry.

Stephen, Sir Leslie. Life of Henry Fawcett. 1886.....92 F291s

List of Fawcett's published works, p.469-472.

Though Mr Stephen was for 30 years one of Fawcett's most intimate friends this biography dwells far more on his public work and career than on his vigorous and interesting personality.

FAY, Amy.

Music-study in Germany. 1896.....92 F295m

The same. 1881.....r92 F295

Miss Fay lived in Germany from 1870 to 1875, studying music under celebrated masters, including Taussig, Kullak, Deppe and Liszt. She wrote during that time to her home in Boston frankly ingenuous and entertaining letters describing her musical experiences and impressions, and affording pleasant glimpses of German home and social life.

FERGUSSON, Robert.

Grosart, Alexander Balloch. Robert Fergusson. 1898.

(Famous Scots series.).....92 F389g

Ferrier, John, comp. Memoir and correspondence of Susan

Ferrier, 1782-1854; ed. by J. A. Doyle. 1898.....92 F421f

Scottish novelist. Her letters describe the society of her day, and in them we meet many of the originals of characters in her novels.

FIELD, Cyrus West.

Judson, Mrs Isabella (Field). Cyrus W. Field; his life and work, 1819-1892. 1896.....92 F456j

Mr Field's life-story is well worth reading apart from his share in the laying of the Atlantic cable, with which his name is so honorably associated.

FIELD, David Dudley.

Field, Henry Martyn. Life of David Dudley Field. 1898..92 F4572f

"To be regarded as a tribute of fraternal affection rather than as a true biography. Mr. Field's career was in many respects very remarkable, and his abilities were admitted to be of the highest order, but many important events in his career are unmentioned here, and his abilities did not produce the results which his brother naturally attributes to them." Nation, 1898.

FIRTH, Frank Russell.

Young engineer; memoir of Frank Russell Firth, with a sketch of the life of Otis Everett Allen. 1874.....92 F521y
Short memoir, written for private circulation, with an introduction by Edward Everett Hale, commending as an example the life of the young civil engineer engaged in railway construction in Kansas and Nebraska, 1868-72.

FITHIAN, Philip Vickers.

Journal and letters, 1767-1774; student at Princeton college, 1770-72, tutor at Nomini hall in Virginia, 1773-74; ed. for the Princeton historical association by J. R. Williams. 1900.....92 F554
Fithian was born in 1747 and was a student at Princeton with Burr and Madison and Henry Lee. He gives a graphic account of his life in Virginia as tutor in the household of Robert Carter of Nomini hall during the interesting period just before the Revolution. He was a frequent guest of the Lees of Stratford and Lee hall, the Turbervilles, the Washingtons of Bushfield and other famous families. The notes give much historical and genealogical information about these families.

FITZGERALD, Edward.

Letters to Fanny Kemble, 1871-1883. 1895.....92 F572
More letters; ed. by W. A. Wright. 1901.....92 F572m
These letters belong with the other two volumes of "Letters" and the "Letters to Fanny Kemble." They have the same progressive dates and they cover similar subjects.
The "Letters" will be found in v.1 of his "Letters and literary remains," call number 828 F57 v.1.
"Fitzgerald's letters are...among the best of their kind. They are real letters, written by the most modest of men, with no reputation in his own day and without any suspicion of posthumous honors...they are also candid letters, expressing the actual opinions he had formed on matters of literature and art...above all, they are the letters of a master of style." Spectator, 1902.

Glyde, John. Life of Edward Fitz-Gerald, with an introduction by Edward Clodd. 1900.....92 F572g
Bibliography of the versions and editions of the Rubáiyát of Omar Khayyám, by Edward Fitzgerald, and others, p.341-348; bibliography of articles in reviews and magazines relating to Fitzgerald and Omar, p.349-352.
English poet and translator (1809-83), best known by his rendering of the "Rubáiyát" of Omar Khayyám. His "Letters," published in 1894, tell us in such a charmingly unaffected way just what we want to know of his singularly quiet and uneventful life, that a formal biography is almost needless, but there are some things in Mr Glyde's "Life" which the lovers of the letters may like to note.

FLAUBERT, Gustave.

Faguet, Émile. Flaubert, [in French]. 1899. (Les grands écrivains français.).....92 F619f
"The most important part of the book lies among the hundred pages in the middle, where romanticism and realism are studied, and Flaubert's relation to them and the relations of them to his works." Nation, 1899.

These memoirs of the minister of police under Napoleon, though declared by his family to be forgeries, are undoubtedly founded on genuine documents.
- FOWLER, Sir John.
Mackay, Thomas. Life of Sir John Fowler, engineer. 1900.....92 F848m
"Sir John Fowler must be reckoned one of the grand old men of the Victorian era, for his work began before her Majesty's accession to the throne, and he died the year after the Diamond Jubilee, being then more than 80 years old. He saw the great railway boom and collapse of the later 'forties,' he took the lion's share in the creation of the Metropolitan Railway, and crowned a life's work with the great Firth of Forth bridge in conjunction with Sir Benjamin Baker." Spectator, 1900.

FOX, Caroline.

- Memories of old friends; extracts from journals and letters, from 1835 to 1871; ed. by H. N. Pym. 2v. 1882.....92 F851z Memoir, v.1, p.13-31.
John Stuart Mill and John Sterling were among her intimate friends, and her journal owes its value to her association with many distinguished persons.
"Indicates the gentle, spiritual, and at the same time intellectual and accomplished woman, and it will always be valued as a highly important illustration of the most characteristic thought of the Victorian era." Dictionary of national biography.

FOX, Charles James.

- Russell, John, earl. Memorials and correspondence of Charles James Fox. 4v. 1853-57.....92 F851r
The third Lord Holland began the collection of the material, consisting of letters, notices and anecdotes from contemporary journals and other unpublished manuscripts, and of recollections of Fox's contemporaries, but Lord John Russell prepared the work for the press. There is a great amount of valuable and interesting material, but the arrangement is sometimes rather intricate.

Trevelyan, Sir George Otto. Early history of Charles

James Fox. [1880.].....92 F851t

"Although this volume purports to be only a history of a small part of the life of a single person, yet its historical importance is such as to entitle it to the student's most careful consideration...It is the best picture that has ever been drawn of the transition from the old methods of statesmanship to the new. The author holds that Fox was the first great statesman of the modern school...It is an admirable specimen of literary workmanship, and its charming pages are as instructive as they are fascinating." C. K. Adams.

The life of Fox, between 1774 and 1782, is so inextricably interwoven with the history of the American revolution that Trevelyan has treated this part of Fox's career in his "American revolution," 973-3 T73.

- Herkless, John. Francis and Dominic and the mendicant orders. 1901. (World's epoch-makers.).....92 F866h

"Literature," p.227-230.

Short sketches of St. Francis and St. Dominic, followed by an historical account of the founding of the mendicant orders, particularly the Franciscans and the Dominicans.

Little flowers of Saint Francis of Assisi; tr. fr. the Italian with a brief account of the life of Saint Francis by A. L.

Alger. 1898.....92 F866

"In this little book are contained certain little flowers, miracles and devout examples of that glorious poor follower of Christ, Saint Francis, and of certain of his holy companions, told to the praise of Jesus Christ."

"A series of legends which were collected some two hundred years after his death, having been handed down by word of mouth until that time. They form an excellent biography of him and his disciples, told with quaint simplicity and grace." Preface.

Oliphant, Mrs Margaret Oliphant (Wilson). Francis of Assisi. 1902.....92 F866o

"Few, if any, of St. Francis's many biographers, Catholic or Protestant, have told the exquisite tale of his life and work with more quiet grace and appreciative sympathy." Saturday review, 1871.

Sabatier, Paul. Life of St. Francis of Assisi. 1894.....92 F866s

The same. 1895.....92 F866s

The author, a Protestant, has made a fair and sympathetic study of St. Francis, applying the most modern methods of historical investigation.

 Centenary edition.
 "The book is founded on the most exhaustive study and the most careful observation. The author even visited the more important of Frederick's battle-fields and had surveys made in the interests of absolute accuracy. Every scrap of German writing that would throw light on the reign appears to have been examined and weighed. The result is one of the most remarkable books in the English language, and one, which, all things considered, is unquestionably the best history of Frederick the Great in any language." *C. K. - Snider, Denton Jaques. Life of Frederick Froebel, founder of the kindergarten. 1900.....92 F961s Fröbel's life, from the standpoint of the author, the well-known lecturer and founder of the Chicago kindergarten college, was from beginning to end an illustration of his own principle of the unfolding of the child.

FROISSART, Jean.

- Robinson, Agnes Mary Frances, afterward Mme Darmesteter, afterward Mme Duclaux. Froissart; tr. by E. F. Poynter. 1895.....92 F963r
So little is known of the facts of Froissart's life that it is by no means easy to write the story of it, but Madame Darmesteter has very skilfully used both the old material and some which has been discovered recently. Being herself both historian and poet she is just the one to rightly estimate Froissart, who was so essentially both poet and historian.

 Gaine (1726?-1807) was a Scotch-Irish printer and bookseller. In 1752 he established in New York a weekly publication called the "Mercury." At the close of the Revolutionary war, he discontinued the publication of his paper and confined himself to the printing and bookselling business. His journals here printed cover two years of the French and Indian war, five years of the Revolutionary war and two years of John Adams's presidency. They contain many minute details of interest to both the general and local historian.

 "A volume designed to supply historians with some of the materials for the history of a period as yet only imperfectly understood. For the financial history of the years between 1801 and 1829 the volume is of importance only second to that of Gallatin's works. It is not a biography written for popular use, but rather a narrative designed to assist the most thoughtful student." C. K. Adams.

 Autobiography; tr. by A. Werner. 3v. 1889.....92 G185

 "Throughout his eventful and romantic career, Garibaldi had years of comparative inaction, at least as respects public life...During those years he wrote the first part of his Memoirs, comprising his youth, his joining the Mazzinian uprising in Piedmont, his exile to South America, his ten years' guerilla warfare in that country, and the prominent part he took in the Italian revolution of 1848-49. This he did not publish at the time; but, after the eventful epochs of the Franco-Italian war against Austria, the Sicilian uprising against the Bourbons of Naples led by him and his one thousand red-shirted volunteers...and, finally, the Franco-Prussian war...Garibaldi, on retiring to his island home at Caprera, corrected and modified the first portion, and wrote the remainder without books or documents, or any assistance save his own memory...Space will not allow us to comment on Mme. Mario's Supplement [v.3 of the 1889 edition], except to say that it...is...the most thorough and authoritative addition to Garibaldi's memoirs that has yet been published." Nation, 1889.

The autobiography, begun in 1810, tells the story of the poet's life down to the time of his settlement in Weimar in 1775. The annals continue it to 1819.

"Has great charm, but the charm is scarcely, if at all, the kind which belongs to Autobiography. Its calm artistic delineation of men, scenes and influences... however we may prize them, only approximate to Autobiography; left as they are without the precise detail, and above all without the direct eloquent egotism which constitutes the value and charm of such works." Lewes's Life of Goethe.

 "Has become the standard work on the subject...It shows his characteristic merits of clear good sense, independent criticism, and unflagging vivacity. Goethe's idolaters were of course dissatisfied, and Lewes's general prepossession against German style and dislike of the mystic and allegorical may disqualify him for adequate appreciation of some aspects of Goethe's genius. "Books used and referred to in this work," v.1, p.13-14.
This 18th century Venetian dramatist and opponent of Goldoni possessed unusual powers of observation and description and a keen sense of humor and had a very varied experience of life. His "Memoirs" deal with family affairs, discuss fashion, philosophy, treat in great detail of actors and acting, give lively portraits of all classes, in short enable us to study thoroughly Venetian society at the end of the 18th century.
- GRADY, Henry Woodfin.
Harris, Joel Chandler, ed. Life of Henry W. Grady, including his writings and speeches. 1890.....92 G764h
Mr Grady was well known by his newspaper work, especially on the Atlanta (Georgia) Constitution, but even better known by his speeches, two famous ones being "The new South," delivered in New York, and "The race problem," which was delivered in Boston just before his death. A man of fine character, an eloquent orator and a writer of much ability, he was a great power in the South.

Extends from 1861 to 1865.
"The author had a story of the utmost dignity to tell, he possessed exceptional opportunities of knowing it thoroughly, and he has told it well; and this is true in spite of the fact that...[it is] almost an apotheosis of Grant, who is credited with every military virtue and with a large share of the other virtues." Nation, 1868.

 Letters; ed. by Leslie Stephen. 1901.....92 G829
 "Works of J. R. Green," p.497-503.
 So far as possible the editor has limited his own work to narratives explaining Green's position during various periods of his life. These are derived from a fragmentary diary, from autobiographical reminiscences taken down by Mrs Green, and from information collected from friends. Most of the early letters are addressed to Prof. Boyd Dawkins and the majority of the later to E. A. Freeman.
- GREENE, Gen. Nathanael.

 Candid and intelligent study of the military operations of the Revolution and Greene's public relations. Valuable to students and interesting to the general reader.
- Greene, George Washington. Life of Nathanael Greene.
 3v. 1878-90.....92 G837g
 "As the most important biography of the ablest subordinate to Washington in the Revolutionary War, these volumes are not without considerable historical value. They throw much light on the military history of the war, especially that portion of it which was under General Greene's immediate direction. The biographer differs in some important particulars from Bancroft; and, therefore, the two works may well be used in common." C. K. Adams.

Reminiscences and recollections; anecdotes of the camp, court, clubs and society, 1810-1860. 2v. 1900.....92 G933

English officer and society "beau" of the first half of the 19th century. "When he relates his personal experiences, as in his account of the state of Paris in 1815, the condition of society in London in his own time, and the doings of the court of Napoleon III, his testimony is to be relied on, but his second-hand stories and anecdotes of persons whom he did not know are of little value." Dictionary of national biography.

GUÉRIN, Eugénie de.

Journal; ed. by G. S. Trebutien. 2v. 1893.....92 G958j

The history of Eugénie de Guérin and her brother Maurice is left in the form of journals and letters, the most intimate records of their characters and spirits. Eugénie's journal was written for her brother only; during her lifetime no one else ever saw it.

Matthew Arnold says, "Her soul had the same characteristic quality as ... [her brother's], talent,—distinction. To the circle of spirits marked by this rare quality, Maurice and Eugénie de Guérin belong; they will take their place in the sky which these inhabit, and shine close to one another."

 "He writes from considerable knowledge of the original authorities, and he undoubtedly succeeds in expressively delineating some sides of sixteenth-century life in France...Here [in the essay on Agrippa d'Aubigné] Mr. Macdowall has drawn the portrait remarkably well, and he shows a fine taste in letters, as well as an accurate judgment of Henri Quatre, Huguenotism, and his own hero. The third essay is a quiet and pathetic, even charming, sketch of Catherine of Navarre, Henri's unhappy sister." Literature, 1898.

 Rachel, lady Russell, was the wife of that Lord Russell who was beheaded in 1683 on a charge of treason. A woman of fine mind she was her husband's adviser, and even after his death followed public events with keen interest. Lady Herbert was the wife of Sir Edward Herbert, an adherent of the Stuarts. There is an interesting account of her rescue of her husband after the battle of Naseby and their escape to France.
- HERBERT of CHERBURY, Edward Herbert, baron.
 Lives of Lord Herbert of Cherbury and Thomas Ellwood, with essays by W. D. Howells. 1877. (Autobiographic series.)92 H461
 "The autobiography of Lord Herbert is of a style so charming, and of a manner and matter so singularly characteristic of his order, age, and nation, that one might easily believe it written by some skilful student of the period...As you read, you cannot help thinking...that Thackeray himself could not have done it better, if he had been minded to portray a gentleman of the first James's time. Yet this picture, so frank, so boldly colored, so full of the very life of a young English noble, is one of the most remarkable instances of self-portraiture in any language...A rare sincerity marks the whole memoir, and gives it the grace of an antique simplicity...Herbert, not only as James's ambassador to Louis XIII., but as a sort of soldier of fortune in the Low Countries, and a peaceful traveller in Italy, saw everything that was best worth seeing in the Europe of his day." *W.  "Written in a fresh and piquant manner...There is also the fascination which habitually inheres in times and manners very different from our own—the voyage of 15 weeks' duration; the pleasant glimpse of Manila as it was in 1829; the delightful impressions of the South African Dutch in 1834; the visit to St. Helena, before Napoleon's dust had been removed to France...But altogether the most interesting aspect of Miss Low's journal is the entirely frank and simple revelation of the young writer's mind and heart." Nation, 1900.

"Memoir itself is but a sketch...Those, however, who have a spare hour on their hands might well spend it in studying the character of one who, in his brother's words 'was only a good specimen of thousands of Englishmen of high culture, high courage, high principles, who are living their own quiet lives in every corner of the kingdom.'" Saturday review, 1873.

HUGO, Victor.

Letters; ed. by Paul Meurice. 2v. 1896-98.....92 H899

v.1. To his family, Sainte-Beuve and others.

v.2. From exile and after the fall of the empire; to Ledru-Rollin, Mazzini, Garibaldi, Lamartine and others.

"If the first volume...[contains] little else than dulness, the second offers the pleasing contrast of much attractive and valuable matter, whether for literature or for biography...The principal literary interest...of the correspondence arises from its unexpected abundance of illustrations of Hugo's characteristic mannerisms of style...One of the greatest merits of [the second] volume lies in its constant presentation of an aspect of his character not sufficiently dwelt on...the sunny and cheerful geniality of his prevailing mood." Nation, 1898.

Love letters, 1820-1822, with comment by Paul Meurice.

1901.92 H899l

Appeared in an abridged form in "Harper's magazine," v.101-102, Nov. 1900-Jan. 1901.

Written to Adèle Foucher, whom he married in 1822.

"They are love-letters pure and simple, the rapturous outpourings of a youth of genius who has nothing to conceal...and whose pen paints with delicate fidelity the fluctuating emotions of the lover's heart." Dial, 1901.

Memoirs; tr. by J. W. Harding. 1899.....92 H899me

"In no sense a connected autobiography...little more than scattered scraps of memoranda relating only to a few isolated episodes—and these not always the most important episodes—of his career...Not very well translated." Literature (Eng.), 1899.

- HUXLEY, Thomas Henry.
 Huxley, Leonard. Life and letters of Thomas Henry Huxley, by his son. 2v. 1900.....92 H983h
 "Strongest...in the presentation of Huxley's character and personality. Mr. Huxley's own writing is thoroughly good, and his appreciation of his father's scientific work is clear, but he leaves him for the most part to expound it in his letters...What we do get everywhere is the reaction of Huxley's mind upon his work, and its effect on others, with a good deal of its tentative process in advance of its deliberate expression...The chapters that report his relation to Darwin's epoch-making book are the most dramatic in this biography." Nation, 1901.
- Mitchell, Peter Chalmers. Thomas Henry Huxley; a sketch of his life and work. 1900. (Leaders in science.)...92 H983m
 "List of Huxley's writings," p.15-17.
 "This volume is in no sense an intimate or authorized biography of Huxley. It is simply an outline of the external features of his life and an account of his contributions to biology, to educational and social problems, and to philosophy and metaphysics." Preface.

Excellent popular biography; frank criticism tempers an estimate which is in the main favorable.

Parton, James. Life of Andrew Jackson. 3v. 1887-88....92 J123p

List of publications containing information respecting Andrew Jackson, his times and contemporaries, v.1, p.13-25.

"Unquestionably one of the best of Parton's biographies. Jackson's weaknesses are not concealed; on the contrary he is shown to have had serious faults, but, at the same time, to have been honest and interesting, though not at all times wise...Though the book contains much that a severe judgment would exclude, yet from beginning to end it is a narrative of absorbing interest." *C. References, p.387-392.

The same. 1899. (American statesmen.).....r92 J123si

"A very able and critical treatment of the political and financial history of the years 1824-1840...Prof. Sumner writes as an expounder of the processes of democratic government and a vigorous critic of financial theories and practice, rather than as the biographer of Jackson. The book is one of the most instructive on this period." Larned's Literature of American history.

JACKSON, Gen. Thomas Jonathan, called Stonewall.

Cooke, John Esten. Stonewall Jackson; a military biography. 1876.....92 J126c

Popular biography from the Southern standpoint. The writer had no access to the military records, and his narrative of military operations is more picturesque and interesting than reliable.

Henderson, George Francis Robert. Stonewall Jackson and the American civil war. 2v. 1898.....92 J126h

Exhaustive and elaborate military biography and history by an English officer who, if not partisan, is certainly not unfavorable to the Southern side.

The same. 1899. (American statesmen.)r92 J223p1

"Thoughtful and judicious account of the life of one of the best and ablest of the old Federalist statesmen...It abounds in excerpts from Jay's correspondence, and gives an unusually clear picture of the Revolutionary period and two succeeding generations." Larned's Literature of American history.

Whitelock, William. Life and times of John Jay. 1887..92 J223w

"Sketch of the history of the United States during the years 1774-1800 with Jay as the central figure. Based on the ordinary materials. Very favorable to Jay." Larned's Literature of American history.

JAY, William.

Tuckerman, Bayard. William Jay and the constitutional movement for the abolition of slavery. 1894.92 J223t

Bibliography, p.171-173.

This memoir is largely devoted to the part borne by Judge Jay in anti-slavery work, his relations to the abolition societies and the political antislavery parties.

JEFFERIES, George, baron. See JEFFREYS, George, baron.

JEFFERIES, Richard.

Story of my heart; my autobiography. 1898.92 J231s

English writer (1848-87), best known for his descriptions of nature.

"A writer of a perfectly original type, and at the same time intensely English...he is unparalleled, unless by Shelley, for the eloquent expression of the mere rapture of living, of the joy of existence in fresh air and clear light amid lovely landscape...'The Story of my Heart'...idealises the feelings and yearnings of his youth; it is hardly what the lad really thought, but embodies all he was to think when he should have intellectually come to man's estate. The one fixed point in it is its intense pantheism." Dictionary of national biography.

Besant, Sir Walter. Eulogy of Richard Jefferies. 1888.92 J231b

List of Jefferies' works, p.366-369.

Besant's feeling for Jefferies, according to his own confession, is one of "admiration pure and unalloyed." The natural result is that his book will be completely acceptable only to those whose enthusiasm is equal to his own.

JEFFERSON, Joseph.

Autobiography. 1890.92 J232

"Mr. Jefferson's style has the cadence and the color of good dramatic writing, with a charm that seems to be his own...Quaint and odd as were many of the personages whom he recalls for us in these pages, he sketches them with unflinching charity, with never a hint of acerbity, and with very remarkable skill...Something more than merely amusing. We see here the judgment of an expert with broad sympathies and a chastened taste." Nation, 1890.

Winter, William. Life and art of Joseph Jefferson. 1894..92 J232w

In his account of the long career of the actor (1829-1905) Mr Winter includes much of the earlier history of the American stage and accounts of some of Mr Jefferson's contemporaries. Illustrated.

JEFFERSON, Thomas.

- Curtis, William Eleroy. The true Thomas Jefferson. 1901.92 J2323c
Series of sketches showing Jefferson as lawyer, farmer, politician, author of the Declaration of independence, founder of the University of Virginia, and as a scientific and literary man. The author hopes by this unconventional form to show Jefferson as he was and not as he has hitherto been presented either by strong partisans or bitter opponents.
- Lee, Henry, 1787-1837. Observations on the writings of Thomas Jefferson, with reference to the attack they contain on the memory of Gen. Henry Lee. 1832.92 J2323l
With newspaper clippings and annotations by Judge Veech.
The "Gen. Henry Lee" referred to is the Revolutionary officer known as "Light-horse Harry."
- Merwin, Henry Childs. Thomas Jefferson. 1901.92 J2323me
Brief impartial biography.
- Morse, John Torrey. Thomas Jefferson. 1892. (American statesmen.)92 J2323m
The same. 1899. (American statesmen.)92 J2323mi
"Brief popular biography based on Randall's Life and Jefferson's Works. Over two thirds of the book are devoted to Jefferson's official career after 1790, his relations to Washington, Hamilton, Randolph, Burr, to the Louisiana purchase, and to the embargo receiving particular attention." Larned's Literature of American history.
- Parton, James. Life of Thomas Jefferson. 1889.92 J2323p
"The least valuable of the author's biographical productions, with the possible exception of the 'Life of Burr' . . . The author seems to have been moved by two impulses equally strong—admiration of Jefferson and aversion to Hamilton . . . The narrative is fascinating, but the historical value of the work is very slight." C. K. Adams.
- Pierson, Hamilton Wilcox. Jefferson at Monticello; the private life of Thomas Jefferson. 1862.92 J2323pi Reminiscences of the manager of Jefferson's estate at Monticello from 1800 to 1820.
- Randall, Henry Stephens. Life of Thomas Jefferson. 3v. 1858.92 J2323r
"By far the most valuable of the biographies of Jefferson. It is a very elaborate effort to place the third President before the people . . . in a favorable light. The author . . . has brought together a large amount of valuable material . . . It is chiefly in this material that the real importance of the volumes consists." C. K. Adams, 1888.
- Schouler, James. Thomas Jefferson. 1893. (Makers of America.)92 J2323s
Brings out clearly Jefferson's far-seeing intuition, not only in statecraft but also in moral and educational matters.
- Tucker, George. Life of Thomas Jefferson, with parts of his correspondence. 2v. 1837.92 J2323t
With ms. annotations by Judge Veech.
"Formerly the standard life of Jefferson, based largely on correspondence and papers, but written with a love of the subject which frequently leads to a strong bias. Eulogy often takes the place of critical judgment." Larned's Literature of American history.
- Watson, Thomas Edward. Thomas Jefferson. 1900. (Beacon biographies of eminent Americans.)92 J2323w
Bibliography, p.147-150.
"It is remarkable that so few pages can give so comprehensive an understanding of the immense versatility of the man, of the range of his interests and information and of his great and manifold services to state and nation." American historical review, 1901.

 Gower, Lord Ronald Charles Sutherland Leveson-. Joan of Arc. 1893.....92 J329g
 Bibliography of Joan of Arc, p.311-321.
 Written with much enthusiasm for the subject, and aims at giving a picture of his heroine, rather than a discussion of controverted points. Illustrated.
- Lowell, Francis Cabot. Joan of Arc. 1896.....92 J329l
The same. 1896.....r92 J329l
 "Learned and compact biography." Nation, 1896.
 Mr Lowell's design is to exclude the legendary element by stating just what is known of Joan's actual life and achievements. The result is that her personality stands out pure, strong and simple without artificial light.

Michelet, Jules. Joan of Arc. [1858.].....92 J329m
From his "History of France."

The same, with Boswell's Journal of a tour to the Hebrides, and Johnson's Diary of a journey into north Wales; ed.

by G. B. Hill. 6v. 1891.....92 J365b

"Assuredly a great, a very great work. Homer is not more decidedly the first of heroic poets,—Shakespeare is not more decidedly the first of dramatists,—Demosthenes is not more decidedly the first of orators, than Boswell is the first of biographers. . . Many of the greatest men that have ever lived have written biography; Boswell was one of the smallest men that ever lived, and he has beaten them all." Macaulay's Essays.

Grant, Frederick Richard Charles. Life of Samuel Johnson. 1887. (Great writers.).....92 J365g

United States—Congress. Obituary addresses on the occasion of the death of the Hon. William R. King of Alabama delivered in the Senate and House of representatives and in the Supreme court of the United States, 8th and 9th Dec. 1853. 1854.....92 K267u
From 1811 King was almost continuously in public life, dying a few months after his election to the vice-presidency.

KINGSLEY, Charles.

Kingsley, Mrs Fanny (Grenfell), ed. Charles Kingsley; his letters and memories of his life. 2v. 1894.....92 K272k
"It is not merely as the author of a few clever novels, or brilliant essays, or pretty little poems; it is not merely as an eloquent preacher or capable exponent of popular science that Charles Kingsley has a distinctive claim to be honourably remembered...it is rather as one who, as a teacher and writer, exercised a very remarkable influence over others, and especially over those of a younger generation." Edinburgh review, 1877.

Stubbs, Charles William, dean. Charles Kingsley and the Christian social movement. 1899.....92 K272s
Frederick Denison Maurice is nearly as prominent as Kingsley, of whom there is a most agreeable though sketchy picture, but the book is chiefly given to an account of the social movement of the middle 19th century.

KINSEY, John.

Walton, Joseph Solomon. John Kinsey, speaker of the Pennsylvania assembly and justice of the Supreme court of the province. 1900.....92 K276w
Short sketch of the Quaker leader (1693-1750).

- KONER, Max. See Artists, p.1264.
- KOSSUTH, Louis.
- Memories of my exile. 1894.....92 K392
 Though the famous Hungarian patriot was exiled in 1849 and remained in exile until his death in 1894 the "Memories" deal only with the Italian war of 1859 and its effect on the destiny of Hungary.
- KOVALÉVSKY, Sónya.
- Recollections of childhood, with a biography by A. C. Leffler. 1895.....92 K397
 Mme Kovalevsky was a gifted Russian mathematician and author.
 "Mr. Gladstone is right in saying that the biography of Sonia Kovalevsky is a book of extraordinary interest...There is nothing in the world more interesting than to obtain fresh insight into the real nature of a human soul...The character here described is that of a woman of extraordinary intellectual powers and of extraordinary richness and force of character... The story of her life is intensely interesting and intensely sad." Nation, 1895.
- KRASINSKA, Françoise, countess, afterward duchess of Courland.
- Journal; tr. fr. the Polish by Kasimer Dziekonska. 1896..92 K413
 "Gives, with charming naïveté, a picturesque account of high life in Poland at the middle of the [18th] century—a life still pervaded by feudal traditions and customs...The Countess writes with all the vivacity of a girl who does not suspect that the glamour will pass, but withal she has very keen eyes, that see just those details which posterity is most interested in and rarely finds in formal histories." Nation, 1895.

Memoirs of a revolutionist. 1899.....92 K425
Appeared in the "Atlantic monthly," v.82-84, Sept.1898-Sept. 1899, with the title "The autobiography of a revolutionist."
"Kropotkin's story is a singularly rich, diversified, and romantic one, and it is attractively told. Nothing more interesting in its way has ever been written than the chapters relating his prison life and escape. The book abounds in instructive pictures of Russian life and character, done with unconscious art." Dial, 1900.
- KRÜDENER, Barbe Julie (de Wietinghoff), baronne de.
Ford, Clarence. Life and letters of Madame de Krudener.
1893.92 K4262f
"Authorities consulted," p.15-16.
Born at Riga in 1764, she led a brilliant social and intellectual life till she was about 30, when she was suddenly converted and devoted the rest of her life to the most exalted preaching and exhortation. Her special renown was acquired through her remarkable influence over the Russian emperor, Alexander I.
"Mr. Ford's compilation from the Continental authorities is a valuable piece of work, and a service to English-speaking students of modern Russian history who constantly encounter allusions to one of the most famous of Russian women." Nation, 1893.
- KRUGER, Paul.

Popular biography.
- Memoirs of La Fayette, embracing sketches of the American revolution, the French revolution, the downfall of Bonaparte and the restoration of the Bourbons. 1825..r92 L144
This narrative, hastily compiled by an anonymous writer, must not be confounded with Lafayette's own "Memoirs."
- Pelet de la Lozère, Privat Joseph Claramont, comte. La-fayette en Amérique et en France. 1867.....92 L144p Deals at much greater length with Lafayette's career in France than with his American career.

- Sichel, Edith. Household of the Lafayettes. 1897.....92 LI44s
 Author is at her best in her general surveys of events, and she gives an interesting portrait of Adrienne de Lafayette, distinguished even in an age of notable women. Her statements are not always strictly according to history. Illustrated.
- Tuckerman, Bayard. Life of General Lafayette, with a critical estimate of his character and public acts. 2v.
 1889.92 LI44t
 "The greater part of the first volume deals with his American experiences...The whole of the second volume is devoted to his arduous labors during and after the French Revolution. The pictures of life in France, as painted by Mr. Tuckerman, form a brilliant addition to our knowledge of French history. Then comes one long swath of sunlight in the visit, in 1824, of Lafayette to America, and the homage of a grateful people." Critic, 1889.

LAMB, Gen. John.

Leake, Isaac Q. Memoir of the life and times of John

Lamb. 1850.....r92 L1791l

"Lamb was the leader of the Sons of Liberty in New York, beginning with the Stamp Act, and was connected with the most rabid spirits of the Revolution in that colony. Later, he was in the Canadian campaign, in command of West Point when Arnold tried to betray it, and was at the Yorktown surrender. His memoirs cover these topics, as well as the treatment of the Loyalists in New York, the adoption of the Constitution, and later New York politics." Larned's Literature of American history.

LAMBALLE, Marie Thérèse Louise de Savoie-Carignan, princesse de.

Bertin, Georges. Madame de Lamballe; tr. by Arabella

Ward. 1901.....92 L181b

The story of Madame de Lamballe (1749-92), her intimacy with Marie Antoinette and her devotion to the royal family, forms an interesting and pathetic chapter in the history of the French revolution. This biography seeks to show that her murder by the mob was entirely unmerited.

LAMBERTON, Robert.

Eaton, Samuel John Mills. Memorial of the Hon. Robert

Lamberton. 1885.....92 L184e

Short sketch of a typical Scotch-Irishman who settled in Franklin, Pennsylvania about 1830, and there engaged in trade and various other enterprises.

LAMPSON, Frederick Locker-

My confidences; an autobiographical sketch. 1896.....92 L211

"Locker-Lampson's literary acquaintance embraced most of the authors of his time...These recollections are cheery, consciously unaffected, and deliberately discursive...They contain capital...stories and some shrewd perspectives of character...Vitality is never missing...and the self-portraiture most undeniably charms." Athenaeum, 1896.

These reminiscences, which cluster about the middle years of the 19th century, include recollections of George Eliot, Thackeray, Dickens, Leigh Hunt, Carlyle, Dean Stanley and others.

English poet and novelist of early 19th century.

"As a poetess Letitia Elizabeth Landon can only rank as a gifted improvisatrice...If not entitled to a high place in literature upon her own merits, she will nevertheless occupy a permanent one as a characteristic representative of her own time." Dictionary of national biography.

LANDOR, Walter Savage.

Letters, private and public; ed. by Stephen Wheeler. 1899..92 L228

"Lady Graves-Sawle, whom we have to thank for permitting the publication of these private letters, is niece to that 'Rose Aylmer' whom more than one generation has thanked for inspiring perhaps the most Hellenic of English lyrics. Written to Lady Graves-Sawle in her unmarried youth and during the first years of her marriage, they belong to the last division of Landor's life and cover the period of his final sojourn in England and his sad exile to his death-place, Florence... We are less grateful for the collection of public letters, rescued from the pages of the extinct 'Examiner.'" Saturday review, 1899.

 "It was as an ornithologist that Lord Lilford was chiefly famed...The most interesting part of this memoir will be found in the letters written at various times to his friends. They show the character of the man, as well as his intimate knowledge and great love of animal life, and especially of birds. The illustrations are chiefly of birds from the collection at Lilford Hall...live birds, which were kept in a state of freedom only second to nature." Knowledge, 1901.

 "It is not easy to imagine that anyone would think so well of Lincoln after reading this book as before, could they not appeal from it to other and more comprehensive representations. This does not mean that Mr. Hapgood has had the intention of writing Lincoln down. He writes more things that are favorable to him than the reverse, and lavishes upon him many strains of generous and lofty praise. But he seems to do these things...from a sense of duty; while he tells the vulgar story and reports the political indirection with as much relish as conscientiousness...Somehow the emphasis appears to be upon the lower things." Nation, 1899.

 Should have given more attention to Lincoln's life before the Civil war. Of all Lincoln's gifts, that of knowing the public mind, and finding his way to the public heart, was the most precious to the country. It is a great merit of this book that it holds this trait constantly before the reader's eye, although the author is himself too much dazzled by it. While Mr Morse cautions his readers very properly against the apotheosis of Lincoln by Nicolay and Hay, yet he is constantly sliding into the tone of idolatry in a lesser degree. Adapted from Nation, 1893.
- Nicolay, John George, & Hay, John. Abraham Lincoln; a history. 10v. 1890.....92 L715n
 The authors, as private secretaries to President Lincoln, stood in most intimate and confidential relations with him, and had his approval of this history for which they began to prepare during the war. Their work is really a history of the period with Lincoln as the central figure, particular attention naturally being given to the political struggle preceding the war, and to the narrative of military events. (Anne-Geneviève de Bourbon). 1899.....92 L844c Mme de Longueville (1619-79), sister of the great Condé, was in her youth an ornament of the Hôtel de Rambouillet, became the heroine of the Fronde, and in later life was attached to the Jansenists and the community of Port Royal.
"In that adventurous time there is no figure so romantic as that of the beautiful Duchess, and no story so exciting as that of her expeditions, her treaties, her narrow escapes, the sad disenchantment of the last days at Bordeaux, when treachery hastened the death of the Fronde and Mazarin's victory. Throughout those reckless years, in spite of terrible mistakes and severe punishment, Madame de Longueville may be said to have been the good angel of a bad cause." Spectator,

"From first to last, the one impression, inclusive of all others, that these letters make, is that Lowell the writer and Lowell the man were absolutely one...And while they do not alter, but confirm our previous apprehension of his personality, they add one of capital importance to the known variety of his gifts—a gift for writing letters of such brightness and such beauty that they are a permanent addition to one of the most delightful satisfactions which the past affords the present and the coming time." Forum, 1894.

LYMAN, Mrs Anne Jean (Robbins).

- Lesley, Mrs Susan Inches (Lyman). Recollections of my mother, Mrs Anne Jean Lyman; being a picture of domestic and social life in New England in the first half of the 19th century. 1899.92 L989f
 Mrs Lyman was the wife of Judge Joseph Lyman of Northampton, Mass. Their social position and overflowing hospitality drew to their home or into the current of their existence many interesting and eminent people, including Emerson, Webster, Bryant, Bancroft, Channing, Harriet Martineau, Lydia Maria Child and John S. Dwight.
 The Round Hill school, the law school at Northampton, the Unitarian controversy, the slavery agitation, the early growth of American literature—all these add interest to the volume. But, as the title-page indicates, its chief attraction lies in its quality as a picture of the best
 New England life of the times.

LYTTON, Edward George Earle Lytton Bulwer-, baron.

- Meredith, Owen, (pseud. of Edward Robert Bulwer-Lytton, earl of Lytton). Life, letters and literary remains of Edward Bulwer, lord Lytton, by his son. 2v. 1883.92 L999m
 The subject of this book was the author of "Last days of Pompeii,"
 "Last of the barons," "Harold," "Lady of Lyons," "Richelieu," etc.
 These volumes cover the period from 1803 (the date of his birth) to 1832, the first volume containing an autobiographical fragment. Include various fragments of unfinished novels.

MACAULAY, Thomas Babington, lord.

- Morison, James Cotter. Macaulay. [1883.] (English men

 Interesting biography and most thoughtful and suggestive criticism, valuable to every student of Macaulay's place in literature.

- Trevelyan, Sir George Otto. Life and letters of Lord Macaulay. 2v. in 1. 1875.....92 M119t
- "'It was my business,' says he [Trevelyan], 'to show my uncle as he was, and not as I or any one else would have had him'...If Sir George had set himself to cut away all the early and later priggishness, all the evidences of extreme partisanship...if he had given us a Macaulay all family affection, all sweet reasonableness, all pathetic humanity, a trimmed, shorn, and varnished Macaulay, we should have revolted...whereas, by giving the rough with the smooth, and letting the man exhibit himself as he actually was...the revolution of opinion in the minds of some, the establishment once for all of a good opinion in those of others, was done and done thoroughly, so that it will never need to be done again.'" Saintsbury's Essays in English literature.
- MACAULAY, Zachary.
- Knutsford, Margaret (Trevelyan) Holland, viscountess. Life and letters of Zachary Macaulay, by his granddaughter. 1900.....92 M1192k
- Macaulay's services toward abolishing the British slave trade can hardly be overestimated, and this biography is an important contribution to our knowledge of the subject. The story of the family life is interesting and the family letters form an entertaining part of the correspondence.

- Recollections of Marshal Macdonald; ed. by Camille Rousset. 1893.....92 M145r
- Created a marshal of France and duke of Tarentum by Napoleon for his military services.
- "Carries in every page the evidence that it was written, as it professes to be, purely from memory, dashed off at speed, without revision by the aid of documents...What might be lost in fulness of historical detail is more than made up in the lively and vigorous presentation of the Marshal's own personality. He stands vividly before us for what he was—a brave, honest, and blunt man, half Scotch and half French, whose military eminence was fairly won and honorably used." Nation, 1892.

"Mr. Morley is to be thanked, in that he has not joined his mighty voice to the chorus of condemnation; he discriminates, illustrates, puts historical imagination into his final censure, and passes judgment with no note of unctuous rectitude." Academy, 1897.

Villari, Pasquale. Life and times of Niccolò Machiavelli.

2v. 1892.....92 M168v
"The most satisfactory work on the life and public services of this great political philosopher and writer. For centuries Machiavelli has been regarded as a species of sphinx of whom no one could solve the riddle...The work of Professor Villari is an effort to solve the enigma. The theory of the author is that an adequate explanation can only be found in a study of the man and of his times, as revealed especially in his unpublished writings. To this task Villari has applied himself with unusual assiduity and success." C. K. Adams, 1888.

- MADISON, Mrs Dorothy (Payne).
Memoirs and letters of Dolly Madison. 1888.....92 M2361
A record of 40 years of married life of President Madison's wife, by a grandniece. As a picture of political and fashionable life in the early part of this century, these letters, while lacking the sparkle of Abigail Adams's, are still worthy to rank with them. The narrative which holds them together is given simply and with excellent taste.

- Gay, Sydney Howard. James Madison. 1894. (American statesmen.)92 M236g
The same. 1899. (American statesmen.).....r92 M236g
"Viewed from a Federalist (and later non-'state-rights') standpoint. Severe, if not unsympathetic. The author thinks Madison possessed of great powers in ordinary affairs, but lacking purpose in crises; deplores his defection from the Hamiltonians, belittles the war of 1812, and sustains the attitude of New England. Nevertheless it is the best brief biography of Madison extant [1902]. Especially full on the origin of the Federal convention." Larned's Literature of American history.

v.1. Manning as an Anglican.
v.2. Manning as a Catholic.
The biography has been much criticized as belittling its subject and betraying his confidence.
"Whatever view is taken of Manning's personal character, his methods and his principles, it must be acknowledged that his was a picturesque and commanding figure, that he was a distinguished Englishman and a distinguished prince of the Church. This, however, is not the impression gathered from this narrative." Athenaeum, 1896.

Craik, Mrs Dinah Maria (Mulock). A legacy; being the life and remains of John Martin, schoolmaster and poet. 1878.92 M428c

Born in the East end of London, his early life was spent in the depths of misery and poverty, but in spite of everything he educated himself sufficiently to be a schoolmaster, though he never achieved the literary recognition he so much desired. Most of the book is occupied with his journals and note-books.

MARTINEAU, Harriet.

Autobiography; ed. by M. W. Chapman. 2v. 1877.....92 M431

Memorials of Harriet Martineau, by Mrs M. W. Chapman, v.2, p.131-596.

English author, of the 19th century, whose first literary success was a series of stories illustrating the political economy of Malthus, Ricardo and James Mill. In 1834 she visited America and assisted the abolitionists.

"This is doubtless one of the very honestest autobiographies ever written, and in respect to careful self-analysis, it probably stands at the head of its whole class...The little deaf woman...was courted by lords, commons, and society at large...She saw everybody in London who was notable...but there was no figure in this circle more remarkable than Harriet Martineau herself, a young woman of thirty, into whose ear-trumpet philosophers dropped their theories and states-

- men their plans, while she in return supplied, at their request, facts, theories, and themes." Nation, 1877.

"As an exposition...of Dr. Martineau's teaching, and as an account of the progressive steps by which the force of that teaching was borne in upon a mind not altogether inclined to accept it as true in its entirety, Mr. Jackson's book must be pronounced a most satisfying and nutritive one." Dial, 1900.
- MARTYN, Henry.
Smith, George, b. 1833. Henry Martyn, first modern missionary to the Mohammedans, 1781-1812. [1892.]....92 M434s
Henry Martyn was one of the most heroic figures in English missionary history. This biography is written in the light of recent (1892) knowledge of India, Persia and Turkey.
- MARY I, queen of England.
Stone, J. M. History of Mary I, queen of England, as found in the public records, despatches of ambassadors, in original private letters and other contemporary documents, [1516-1558]. 1901.....92 M4393s
Much of the substance of this history is derived from the despatches of foreign ambassadors, Giustinian, Chapuys, Renard, Michiel and others, and from the English chroniclers, Stone, Holinshed, Machyn, etc.
Queen Mary is shown in a much more favorable light than usual.
- MARY, queen of Scots.

De Peyster, John Watts. Inquiry into the career and character of Mary Stuart and a justification of Bothwell.
1883.q92 M439de
Bound with his "Bothwell."
Includes a discussion of the authenticity of the Casket letters, which the author believes to be genuine.
De Peyster, John Watts. Mary, queen of Scots; a study.
1882.q92 M439de
Bound with his "Bothwell."
Short study, on the whole unfavorable to Mary.
Dumas, Alexandre, the younger. Mary Stuart, queen of Scots; tr. by J. M. Howell. 1896.....92 M439d
Familiar and graphic in style, it still keeps very close to the facts of Mary's life, though naturally choosing the most dramatic scenes to dwell upon.
Kaufman, Rosalie, ed. Mary, queen of Scots; abridged from Agnes Strickland's Queens of Scotland. 1892....92 M439k Gives the most important parts of Miss Strickland's warm defense of Queen Mary, which was first published in 1852, and founded on careful study of the documents then available. Illustrated.

- Lang, Andrew. Mystery of Mary Stuart. 1901.....92 M439l
Appendix contains Scottish and English translations, and original French version of the Casket letters.
The most serious charges against the character of the Scottish queen are involved in the partial or complete authenticity of what are known as the "Casket letters," a series of eight epistles which came into the hands of Mary's enemies in 1567. Half of Mr Lang's book is devoted to an examination of these letters, and, though the author disavows the intention of defending Mary's innocence, he throws a searching light on the intricacies of the tragedy.
- Mignet, François Auguste Marie. History of Mary, queen of Scots. 1887.....92 M439m
Careful, unprejudiced, elaborate presentation of the adverse view and, though first published in 1851, still in many respects a standard authority.

List of authorities consulted, p.13-16.
Daughter of a poor French captain of the guards, she became the wife of Sobieski, who owed his crown almost as much to her cleverness as to his own military ability.
- MASERS de LATUDE, Jean Henri.
Escapes of Casanova and Latude from prison; ed. by P. Villars. 1892. (Adventure series.).....92 M444
Masers de Latude (1728-1805) was one of the celebrated prisoners of the Bastille and in confinement for 35 years before he finally made his escape. Casanova, one of the most noted adventurers of the 18th century, was imprisoned in Venice for political reasons. The graphic story of his escape, here translated from his remarkable "Memoirs," gained him great celebrity.
- MASON, George.
Rowland, Kate Mason. Life of George Mason, 1725-1792, including his speeches, public papers and correspondence. 2v. 1892.....92 M449r
Bibliography, v.1, p.17.
Gives a genealogy of the Mason family in Virginia, a biography of the "planter statesman of the Revolution," an abbreviated history of the time, an exposition of the political opinions and principles of which he was so distinguished an advocate. He was an intimate associate of Washington in public and private affairs, member of the Virginia assembly and author of the "Declaration of rights," member of the convention that drafted the constitution of the United States. Thomas Jefferson says of him that he was "a man of the first order of wisdom among those who acted on the theatre of the Revolution, of expansive mind, profound judgment, cogent in argument, learned in the lore of former constitutions, and earnest for the republican change on democratic principles."
- MASON, William, b. 1829.
Memories of a musical life. 1901.....92 M453 Entertaining and valuable reminiscences of music and musicians, chiefly in Europe, by one of the best known living (1901) American musicians.

MASSIE, Nathaniel.

Massie, David Meade. Nathaniel Massie, a pioneer of Ohio; his life and selections from his correspondence.

1896.92 M458m

"Bare, matter of fact narrative of the life of a distinguished actor in early Ohio history...He was a surveyor, land speculator, founder of towns and politician. He was a pronounced Jeffersonian...and an active advocate of the early admission of Ohio to the Union. Historically the main interest of the book is in the original documents relating to this event." Larned's Literature of American history.

MATAMOROS, Manuel.

Greene, William. Manuel Matamoros; his life and death; a narrative of the late persecution of Christians in Spain.

1866.92 M467g

Matamoros (1834-66) on account of his belief was imprisoned in Spain for several years, and finally condemned to the galley, but the sentence was commuted to exile, during which he did much work for the spread of Christianity in Spain.

MATHER, Cotton.

Wendell, Barrett. Cotton Mather, the Puritan priest.

1891. (Makers of America.)92 M468w

"Authorities," p.309-310.

Mather (1663-1728) was an able minister, a voluminous writer, but is most widely known for his connection with the witchcraft trials where his course has been much criticized. Prof. Wendell believes him to be truthful, honest and devout, but prejudiced, narrow and lacking in judgment.

MATHEWS, Charles James.

Life, chiefly autobiographical, with selections from his correspondence and speeches; ed. by Charles Dickens. 2v.

1879.92 M472

English actor and dramatist (1803-78). This work is the principal authority for the events of his life.

"Full of anecdotes, nearly all of them fresh and well told. Mathews's frequent letters are as light and sprightly as possible." Nation, 1879.

MATHY, Karl Friedrich Wilhelm.

Freytag, Gustav. Karl Mathy, [in German]. 1898.92 M474f

German editor and statesman (1807-68) with a varied career from his connection with the revolution of 1830 through his long work in government departments of finance and trade in Baden, where he did much to develop banks and railways. The memoir is by a friend and fellow journalist.

MAURICE, Frederick Denison.

Maurice, Sir John Frederick, ed. Life of Frederick Denison

Maurice, chiefly told in his own letters. 2v. 1884.92 M495m

Maurice (1805-72), Anglican divine and one of the leaders in the "Christian socialist" movement of the middle of the 19th century.

"In the 'Life of Frederick Denison Maurice' the world has received the picture of a character and the account of an influence. The man himself...was of deeper import than his work, and his character explains the quality and the limits of his influence." Nation, 1884.

MAURIER, George du. See DU MAURIER, George.

MAURY, Gen. Dabney Herndon.

Recollections of a Virginian in the Mexican, Indian and

Civil wars. 1897.92 M498

During his life at West Point and his long service in the United States and Confederate armies Gen. Maury knew intimately most of our military leaders, and his estimates of them are extremely interesting. As is natural the Virginians fare best at his hands.

MAX-MÜLLER, Friedrich. See MÜLLER, Max.

MAXWELL, James Clerk.

Campbell, Lewis, & Garnett, William. Life of James Clerk

Maxwell, with selections from his writings. 1884.....92 M524c

Biography, popular account of his scientific work and a selection from his poetry. Illustrated.

"The interest and freshness of Prof. Campbell's story lie in the light it throws on the subjective influences that moulded the character of the gentle physicist, a character which was the most extraordinary combination that this generation has seen, of practical wisdom, childlike faith, goodness of heart, metaphysical subtlety, and discursive oddity, with wonderful critical sagacity and penetrating scientific genius." Nature, 1882.

Glazebrook, Richard Tetley. James Clerk Maxwell and modern physics. 1896. (Century science series.).....92 M524g

Brief non-technical account of his scientific work.

MEADE, Gen. George Gordon.

Bache, Richard Meade. Life of Gen. George Gordon

Meade, commander of the Army of the Potomac. 1897..92 M553b

"Rather a narrative of the campaigns of the Army of the Potomac; and the intimate history of Meade is limited to a dozen pages at the beginning and a score at the end of the volume...We find the standpoint of the writer to be that of a group of the younger officers who surrounded General Meade, who, starting with the intensest prejudices against the men who succeeded McClellan, transferred the dislike with equal hostility to Grant and Sheridan, when Meade was superseded in the independent command of the Potomac army." American historical review, 1898.

Pennypacker, Isaac Rusling. General Meade. 1901.

(Great commanders.).....92 M553p

"Mr. Pennypacker...sums up as a logical deduction from his whole story, the services of Meade: 'In the history of the wars of the United States, it does not appear that the nation ever profited by the services of any other army commander who combined thorough training with personal energy and skill on the battlefield as did General Meade.' That is a great verdict, and unless the whole structure of Mr. Pennypacker's book can be overthrown, it is a true one." Dial, 1901.

MEDICI, Lorenzo de', prince of Florence.

Armstrong, Edward. Lorenzo de' Medici and Florence in the 15th century. 1896. (Heroes of the nations.)....92 M561a

A graphic and delightful volume in which the brilliant picture of the person and the age is brought vividly before us. Illustrated.

Carpenter, Edith. Lorenzo de' Medici; an historical portrait. 1893.....92 M561c

Brief study, taking a middle ground between admiration and severity of criticism, and pointing out his real accomplishments as poet, scholar, art critic, statesman and man of affairs.

Reumont, Alfred von. Lorenzo de' Medici the Magnificent; tr. fr. the German by Robert Harrison. 2v. 1876..92 M561re

"Not so much a biography of Lorenzo as a history of Italy at the time Lorenzo was its most important figure. The work of an able scholar and historian. The translation has numerous errors." C. K. Adams.

Roscoe, William. Life of Lorenzo de' Medici. 1891.....92 M561r

Memoir of Roscoe, p.19-48.

"Not to be regarded as a good authority. Roscoe's style introduced his books easily into public favor, but his works have been shown again and again to be inaccurate." C. K. Adams.

MEHEMET ALI.

Murray, Sir Charles Augustus. Short memoir of Mohammed Ali, founder of the vice-royalty of Egypt.

1898.92 M568m

Richard, James William. Philip Melancthon, the Protestant preceptor of Germany, 1497-1560. 1898.....92 M581r

Melancthon's Funeral oration over Luther, p.381-392.

Does full justice to his character and work, without concealing his failings. Gives selections from his letters and other writings.

Wilson, Rev. George. Philip Melancthon, 1497-1560.

1897.92 M581w

Having both thorough knowledge of his subject and literary skill Mr Wilson has made an interesting short sketch, giving a good account of the more personal side of his life and of his theological work.

MELBOURNE, William Lamb, viscount.

Dunckley, Henry. Lord Melbourne. 1890. (Prime ministers of Queen Victoria.).....92 M582d

Bibliographical note, p.5.

English Whig statesman, was prime minister in 1834 and 1835-41.

"A readable sketch of Queen Victoria's first Premier and early Mentor ...While Lord Melbourne was not, despite his Premiership, in any sense a great man, he bore no inconsiderable share in great events; and the story of his private life is sufficiently piquant to attract readers who might shrink from following Dr. Dunckley into the maze of British politics." Dial, 1891.

Consists chiefly of letters written after he became court poet at Vienna in 1729.
"He may be considered as the originator of a real improvement in the musical drama, though long since superseded. His popularity as a dramatic poet was great; the charm, grace, melody, and sweetness of his verse have induced the composers to overlook the absence of contrast and strong passion; and in consequence some of his libretti have been set to music thirty or forty times." Grove's Dictionary of music.

- MILL, John Stuart.
Autobiography. 1887.....92 M687
 "The practical record of the formation of an eminent thinker's mental habits and the succession of his mental attitudes...If Mr. Mill's autobiography has no literary grandeur, nor artistic variety, it has the rarer merit of presenting for our contemplation a character that was infested by none of the small passions, and warped by none of the more unintelligent attitudes of the human mind." John Morley, in Fortnightly review, 1874.

 event; but it succeeds, on the whole, in drawing a clear picture of the cheery, hearty, determined, straight-forward, eminently British personality of the man...Profusely illustrated." Nation, 1900.
- MILLER, Hugh.
 My schools and schoolmasters; or, The story of my educa-

 To the author of this autobiography, Thomas Carlyle wrote: "You have painted to us scenes of life, scenes of nature, which rarely come upon the canvas; such draughtsmen, too, are extremely rare in that and in other walks of painting." This book convincingly proves how much education there is out of school—in the experience and thought of every-day life. A work of especial value to readers who regret their lack of thorough formal instruction. Miller was a Scottish geologist and worked as a stone-mason in his youth.

 " 'Scholar, poet, critic, historian, but above all these a perfect Christian gentleman,' Dean Milman was also a man of the world, and a most agreeable member of society at a period when society was most agreeable. Walter Scott and Byron were still alive when he entered it, and Sidney Smith, Whately, Macaulay, Stephen, Monckton Milnes, Rogers, Senior, Lords Holland and Lansdowne, and many others whom it would take too long to enumerate, were his contemporaries."

 Lord Houghton (1809-85) lived in intimate contact with the stirring events in England and Europe for half a century from 1835 onwards, and knew well the chief actors in them. He was an accomplished man of the world, a scholar and man of letters, a critical and philosophical spectator, the friend of Carlyle and Edward Fitzgerald and Tennyson, the political confidant of de Tocqueville and Guizot, equally at home with Landor in Florence and Emerson in Concord. The biography is generously appreciative. Condensed from Saturday review, 1890.

Excellent short biography with clear and discriminating criticism of Milton's poetry and prose by a most competent critic. Mr Garnett differs with Mr Pattison (92 M719p) on the importance of the effect on Milton of the political and religious controversies of the time.
- Masson, David. Life of John Milton. 7v. 1873-94.....92 M719m
"Professor Masson's 'Life of Milton' is an elaborate and often highly interesting study of all the contemporary movements—religious, political, and social—which may be supposed to have influenced the poet's genius or to have moulded the national history." Gardiner & Mullinger's Introduction to English history.
- Pattison, Mark. Milton. [1880.] (English men of letters.)92 M719p
A singularly able monograph, invaluable to students of Milton and his times.
- Trent, William Peterfield. John Milton; a study of his life and works. 1899.....92 M719t
"Is welcome...because it aims and succeeds at getting at the heart of Milton as man and writer, because it is charged with a fine enthusiasm, while yet being quite sane and critical in tone." Spectator, 1899.

MIRABEAU, Honoré Gabriel Riquetti, comte de.

- Memoirs, by himself, his father, his uncle and his adopted child. 4v. 1835-36.....r92 M735
These memoirs, biographical, literary and political, are the most important authority concerning Mirabeau.
- Willert, Paul Ferdinand. Mirabeau. 1898. (Foreign statesmen.)92 M735w
"A portrait which is not less large in treatment because it is small in scale...Mirabeau, after all, was eminent for a statesmanship unique in his time; and it is for this, as well as for his superb, unconscious gift of drama, that Mr. Willert justly esteems him." Spectator, 1898.

MISSING friends; the adventures of a Danish emigrant in

- Queensland, 1871-1880. 1892. (Adventure series.).....92 M743
True experiences of a carpenter as he wandered from place to place looking for work and adventures.

MITCHEL, John.

- Dillon, William. Life of John Mitchel. 2v. 1888.....92 M7452d
Mitchel (1818-75), Irish nationalist. On account of his political utterances he was transported for treason, escaped to America and lived there and in Paris, always working for the Irish cause, until his return to Ireland in 1875. He was active on the Confederate side during the Civil war.

MITCHEL, Ormsby MacKnight.

- Mitchel, Frederic Augustus. Ormsby MacKnight Mitchel. 1887.92 M745m
Life, by his son, of the American astronomer and general (1809-62). He was director of the Cincinnati observatory 1845-59, of the Dudley observatory at Albany 1859-61 and brigadier-general in the Civil war 1861-62. He was an enthusiastic lecturer and was largely instrumental in the establishment of some of the first observatories in the United States.

MITCHELL, Maria.

- Life, letters and journals; comp. by P. M. Kendall. 1896...92 M748
"The life of the first American woman who attained eminence in science, and it is also the perfect picture of the ideally happy life of the woman who devotes herself to scientific pursuits." Nation, 1896.

MITFORD, Mary Russell.

- Life, told by herself in letters to her friends; ed. by A. G.

- K. L'Estrange. 2v. 1870.....92 M754
Miss Mitford (1787-1855) was an English novelist and dramatist. She was an inveterate letter-writer and corresponded with scores of people whom she never met. Her letters are as attractive as her books. The most interesting are those written to Sir William Elford and Miss Barrett. But her correspondents also included Macready, Mrs Hemans, Mrs Trollope, Dyce, Allan Cunningham, Haydon, Douglas Jerrold, Mary Howitt, Harriet Martineau, Mrs Jameson and Barry Cornwall.
- L'Estrange, Alfred Guy Kingham, ed. Friendships of Mary Russell Mitford, as recorded in letters from her literary correspondents. 2v. 1882.....92 M754 Includes letters from Macready, Joanna Baillie, Charles Kemble, Harriet Martineau, N. P. Willis, Elizabeth Barrett, Ruskin, Crabb Robinson, Landor and many others.
- MOFFAT, Robert.
Moffat, John Smith. Lives of Robert & Mary Moffat. [1888.]92 M769m
Pioneers in South African mission work where they labored, 1817-70. It was Moffat who aroused Livingstone's interest in Africa.
- MOHAMMED.
Irving, Washington. Mahomet and his successors. 2v. 1868.92 M772i
"One of the most attractive accounts of the rise of Mohammedanism, and of its development from 622 to 710. It cannot be said to contain any important additions to our knowledge of Mohammedanism; but, like all of Irving's histories, it does much to compensate for any lack of profound research by the charm of an unusually attractive style."
C. K. Adams.
- Muir, Sir William. Mahomet and Islam. [1895.].....92 M772mu
A sketch of the prophet's life from original sources, and a brief outline of his religion.

- MOLTKE, Helmuth, graf von.
Field-marshal Count Helmuth von Moltke as a correspondent; tr. by Mary Herms. 1893.....92 M811f
Selected letters to his father, sisters, brother and other relatives, and to several friends, on a variety of subjects.
Letters to his mother and brothers; tr. by Clara Bell and H. W. Fischer. 2v. 1891.....92 M811l Biography of Frau von Moltke, v.1, p.3-6.
Gives an excellent idea of the real nature of the great German general. Illustrated.
Letters to his wife and other relatives; tr. by J. R. McIlraith. 2v. 1896.....92 M811r
These letters show Moltke to be very different from the ordinary conception of him. To the world he was cold and silent, to his family and friends he was affectionate, kind and sympathetic to a remarkable degree. Though generally regarded as little better than a strategic machine we find in these letters that two of his chief characteristics are admiration of nature and fondness for children. He was a keen observer and his opinions of the people and countries which he saw in his long life are interesting and valuable.

Herms, Mary, tr. Moltke; his life and character. 1892...92 M811h
Largely made up of selections from his journals, letters and autobiographical notes. Includes a tale written at the age of 28. Illustrated with drawings by von Moltke and portraits.

Biography of Gen. Monk, the restorer of Charles II; greatly exalts the hero.

MONMOUTH, James Scott, duke of.

Fea, Allan. King Monmouth; a history of the career of James Scott, "the Protestant duke," 1649-1685. 1902...92 M832f
"The ill-fated career...of James, Duke of Monmouth, the natural son of Charles II., forms an important chapter in English history; and... it is as a picture of the times, rather than of the man, that any recital of his adventures can be of value...The chief interest in Monmouth's career centres, of course, in his invasion from Holland soon after his father's death, and in the battle of Sedgemoor which put an end to his kingly pretensions...The new material drawn upon by the author makes his book well worth the writing." Dial, 1901.

MONROE, James, 1758-1831.

Adams, John Quincy. Lives of James Madison and James Monroe. 1851.....r92 M236a
"Eulogies rather than critical biographies, but valuable as the estimates of the character and services of these statesmen made by a contemporary who knew them well and who had himself taken a large part in the events whereof he writes." Larned's Literature of American history.

Bibliography, p.260-294.
"Short and simple account of the most important events in Monroe's life. When the book was written the Monroe manuscripts at Washington, while not inaccessible, were not easily handled...The publication of these papers may show the desirability of a more extended biography; but probably the general judgments of this book will not be overthrown." Larned's Literature of American history.

MONTAGU, Lady Mary (Pierrepont) Wortley.

Memoir of Lady Montagu, by W. M. Thomas, v.1, p.1-48; Anecdotes of Lady Montagu, by Lady Louisa Stuart, v.1, p.49-121.

From 1718 to 1739, Lady Mary Wortley Montagu was one of the leaders in English society and letters, a friend of Pope, Sir Horace Walpole and Lord Hervey. She accompanied her husband on his embassy to Turkey, and the letters written during this time are her best. Her sprightliness and the easy elegance of her style, her pungent wit and shrewd observations make her letters justly famous.

Letters previous to 1717. 1834. (In Republic of letters, v.1, p.76-131.).....qr828 R35 v.1

MONTAGU, Victor Alexander.

A midddy's recollections, 1853-1860. 1898.....92 M845z

The author began his sea-service when he was only 12 years old. He saw service in the Crimean war, the war with China in 1857, and in the mutiny in India, when he was a member of a naval brigade which did land duty.

- Dufau, Pierre Armand, and others. Claude Montal, facteur de pianos; sa vie et ses travaux. 1857.....qr92 M848d Short sketch of the life and work of a blind man of unusual musical taste who was a maker of excellent pianos.

MONTALEMBERT, Charles Forbes René de Tryon, comte de.

- Oliphant, Mrs Margaret Oliphant (Wilson). Memoir of Count de Montalembert; a chapter of recent French history. 2v. 1872.....92 M848o
 Mrs Oliphant was personally acquainted with Montalembert, she wrote with the aid and sanction of his family, she had access to the best sources of information, and she produced a valuable and interesting memoir to which there is, however, one marked objection. She gives an undue prominence to the romantic, sentimental or sensational aspects of character, and places the clerical enthusiast in broad relief, but hardly does justice to the orator, statesman, author and accomplished man of the world. Condensed from Quarterly review, 1873.

MONTEFIORE, Sir Moses, & Judith (Cohen), lady.

- Diaries, 1812-1883; ed. by L. Loewe. 2v. 1890.....92 M855
 Sir Moses Montefiore (1784-1885) was a Jewish philanthropist of Anglo-Italian origin, who spent his enormous wealth in ameliorating the condition of the Jews in all parts of the world. His life is also interesting from its great length, he having lived to over a hundred years in perfect possession of his faculties.

MONTEFIORE, Sir Moses.

- Wolf, Lucien. Sir Moses Montefiore, with selections from his letters and journals. 1885.....92 M855w

MONTESQUIEU, Charles de Sécondat, baron de.

- Sorel, Albert. Montesquieu; tr. by M. B. Anderson and E. P. Anderson. 1888. (Great French writers.).....92 M859s
 "M. Sorel does his work very well. He gives us a fair notion of what Montesquieu did, but does not contribute much that is new. We knew before that Montesquieu was one of the pioneers of modern political philosophy; that he helped, without knowing or intending it, to pave the way for the French Revolution; and we strongly suspected that a great deal of his speculation was wholly groundless, or, rather that the groundwork of his speculation was often flimsy and unsubstantial. Perhaps the exhibition of this weakness is the best part of M. Sorel's work." Nation, 1888.

"In the portrayal of this energetic and brilliant statesman he [Mr Roosevelt] found a congenial task. Occasionally the author indulges in flip-pant comments, or in exaggerated praise or blame, but on the whole his method and temper are commendable. The life of Morris in Paris during the days of the French Revolution is entertainingly described." Larned's Literature of American history.
- Sparks, Jared. Life of Gouverneur Morris, with selections from his correspondence, and miscellaneous papers. 3v. 1832. r92 M916s
"The early standard life of Morris.  This biography of the poet, decorator, printer, and craftsman in many arts was undertaken at the special request of the late Sir Edward Burne-Jones. The author had unreserved access to all materials in the possession of the family of William Morris. His crowded, brave and useful life is put on record with excellent judgment of essentials and non-essentials.

 "Chronological list of the printed works of William Morris," p.447-452;
 "Publications of the Kelmscott press," p.453-454.
 This does not claim to be a biography or an account of Mr Morris's private life. It is an enlargement of "The art of William Morris" by the same author, the most important addition being a chapter on Morris's connection with the socialistic movement. The author was expressly permitted by Mr Morris to bring out this book and every facility was given for reproducing a number of ornaments of the Kelmscott press. Perhaps the distinctive feature of the book is the chapter "Of the firm of Morris & co., decorators."

- MOSCHELES, Felix.
 Fragments of an autobiography. 1899.....92 M9312
 The author's special gift as a writer of reminiscences was shown in his "In Bohemia with Du Maurier." In this volume he tells of his student life in Paris, of his love affairs, of sketching tours with Claude Raoul Dupont, ocean travel with Henry Irving and Ellen Terry, life in New York and Chicago, and meetings with Mazzini, Rossini and Robert Browning. The volume is illustrated with portraits of the author's mother, of Mazzini and Browning, reproduced from the author's paintings.

built upon previous notices; he has thus produced a trustworthy, and, so far as possible, an exhaustive account of Mozart's life... The result is a work which must be considered as the most trustworthy and serviceable biography that could be produced by a skilful employment of the materials generally accessible. Holmes has not attempted to draw from hitherto unknown sources. He neither carries his researches to any depth nor offers any original opinions or explanations." Jahn's Life of Mozart.

Jahn, Otto. W. A. Mozart [in German]. 2v. 1867.....r2 M948j
The same. 4v. 1856-59.....r2 M948j

The book is not a life of Mozart so much as an encyclopædia of musical art and biography. Not only have we the narrative of the life of Mozart himself from his cradle to his grave in the smallest particulars, with a detailed examination of each work, but we have the history of the rise and progress of each branch of music that Mozart touched. We have also full accounts of the social and musical condition of the various cities visited by Mozart and biographical notices of every person whom his biographer has occasion to mention. Condensed from preface by Sir George Grove.

MÜLLER, Max.

Auld lang syne, 1st-2d ser. 2v. 1898-99.....92 M959

Being ordered by his doctor to go away for a rest, and to take no books with him, Max Müller relieved the tedium of his vacation by writing these fragments of autobiographical reminiscence which are full of interest. In v.1, one chapter is devoted to his "recollections," four contain his "literary recollections," two his "recollections of royalties," and a final chapter on "beggars" gives some entertaining stories of his experiences with needy students, crafty adventurers and literary impostors. v.2, "My Indian friends," includes a chapter on the poets of the Veda, with metrical translations of some of their hymns.

My autobiography; a fragment. 1901.....92 M959m

Supplements Müller's "Auld lang syne," which contains recollections of his friends, but very little about his own life and career. The present volume covers his childhood at Dessau, school-days at Leipzig, and the early part of his career at Oxford.

Smiles, Samuel. A publisher and his friends; memoir and correspondence of John Murray, with an account of the origin and progress of the house, 1768-1843. 2v. 1891..92 M978s

"Murray lived in the world of books and was a great potentate there.

The history of his affairs touches authors and publishers, literature and trade, poetry and politics; and no phase of his varied connections is neglected...The selection is well-proportioned, the arrangement is admirable, and the knowledge conveyed is great in amount." Nation, 1891.

- Hazlitt, William. Life of Napoleon Buonaparte. 3v. 1894.92 N129ha
 "Not... a correct view of Napoleon as he is revealed to us by later investigators, but still one of the best of those originally published in English. Unlike most of the histories of Napoleon written on the north side of the Channel, it shows a strong sympathy for the career of its subject. Certainly in English no better word than this has been spoken for the first emperor. But as all histories written before the publication of Napoleon's Correspondence are now to be regarded as incomplete and imperfect, so this cannot be held as a high authority."

 Méneval was for some years Napoleon's private secretary.
 "The value of these memoirs is scarcely proportional to their bulk. They contain neither inspiring narrative nor profound analysis. The Baron was incapable of either. It is impossible to compare them with the thoughtful memoirs of the Chancellor Pasquier, and they do not contain a trace of the spice that enlivens the reminiscences of the Rémusat family...Unstinted adulation and extravagant panegyric are the warp and woof of these books...Nevertheless...[they] are not entirely devoid of interest." Nation, 1895.

 "An able attempt to stem the resistless tide of condemnation that set in with the publication of Napoleon's correspondence." C. K. Adams.
- Rose, John Holland. Life of Napoleon I, including new materials from the British official records. 2v. 1901-02.92 N129ros
 "This book is rather biographical than historical—that is to say, it deals with Napoleon rather than with the Napoleonic epoch...The chief contribution which Mr. Rose makes to the materials of Napoleon's biography consists in his personal study of the British official records of the Napoleonic times...and...[his] systematic examination of the archives of our Foreign Office, War Office, and Admiralty, from 1795 to 1815, has yielded much valuable information." Athenæum, 1902.
- Rosebery, Archibald Philip Primrose, earl of. Napoleon; the last phase. 1900.....92 N129ro
 "The bulk of the book is devoted to three subjects: the relations between the British government and Napoleon arising out of the captive's custody; Napoleon's life at Longwood...and finally, his character considered in the light of his whole career...The style is beautifully clear and has the characteristics of clever, compact and well-sustained conversation...Judging him by the standard of sheer capacity, Lord Rosebery raises Napoleon to a height beyond which the enthusiasm of the devotee could hardly soar." Nation, 1900.

O'KEEFFE, John.

Recollections of his life. 2v. 1826.....92 O222

O'Keeffe (1747-1833) studied under Benjamin West, but early gave up painting, first for acting, and later for dramatic writing. These rambling recollections are full of gossip of the social and dramatic world in London and Dublin.

OLIPHANT, Laurence.

Oliphant, Mrs Margaret Oliphant (Wilson). Memoir of the life of Laurence Oliphant and of Alice Oliphant his wife. 2v. 1891.....92 O2330

Biography of two very remarkable characters and lives. In Laurence Oliphant (1829-88) a taste for adventure, wit, humor, shrewd business ability and knowledge of the world were singularly combined with a strange religious development. Both he and his wife, a beautiful and attractive woman, had great fascination for all who knew them.

Carte, Thomas. Life of James, duke of Ormond, containing an account of the most remarkable affairs of his time and particularly of Ireland under his government, with an appendix and a collection of letters. 6v. 1851. .92 O285c v.1-2. To Sept. 1643.
v.3. Sept. 1643-1660.
v.4. 1660-1668.
v.5-6. Letters.
James Butler (1610-88), first duke of Ormond, became lord lieutenant of Ireland in 1644. After the execution of Charles I, he attached himself to the cause of Charles II, whom he accompanied into exile. At the restoration in 1662, he was returned to the lord-lieutenancy of Ireland. The biography by Carte is quoted in the "Dictionary of national biography" as one of the chief authorities for the life of the duke of Ormond, especially the collection of letters in the appendix.

"The Diary of Pepys is unquestionably one of the most singular and one of the most entertaining in any language. Though the author was not without royal favor in the days of Charles II, he was not above the work of making record in his diary of the most insignificant affairs... The diary covers the interesting period from 1659 to 1669, and throws a flood of light on the character of that singular decade. It deals with social far more than with political affairs; but the student of politics will here find not only much that will entertain, but also something that will instruct." C. K. Adams.

- Waliszewski, Kazimierz. Peter the Great; tr. fr. the French by Lady Mary Loyd. 1897.....92 P455w
 "It is a marvelous story...and it has been told with great spirit by the author, who is able to include in his narrative many new anecdotes, and much other material that is practically new to English readers."
Saturday review, 1897.
 "The style is graphic, and the volume is as easy to read and as entertaining as a sensational novel...The author is very decided in his views, and, as a whole, eminently fair in his handling of disputed points."
Nation, 1897.
- PETERBOROUGH, Charles Mordaunt, earl of.

 English general and admiral (1658-1735).
 "His parliamentary speeches and letters show him to have been clever, witty, incisive in thought and word. He was a generous and judicious patron of men of letters and science...Swift, however, who had a certain affection for him, calls him with friendly insight 'the ramblingest lying rogue on earth'...The common idea that he was a distinguished commander of fleets or armies rests only on his own statements; while the official documents and the reports of the men who were with him in Spain testify to his incompetence." *Dictionary of

- PETRARCH.
 Robinson, James Harvey, & Rolfe, H. W. Petrarch, the first modern scholar and man of letters; a selection from his correspondence with Boccaccio and other friends; tr. fr. the original Latin, with historical introductions and notes. 1898.....92 P463r
 "Purpose...is essentially historical...Views Petrarch not as a poet, nor even, primarily, as a many-sided man of genius, but as a mirror of his age—a mirror in which are reflected all the momentous contrasts between waning mediævalism and the dawning Renaissance. Petrarch knew almost everyone worth knowing in those days; consequently few historical sources can rival his letters in value and interest." Preface.
 "Petrarch's life, views and character, his friends, and the political and literary conditions of his day are so vividly set before us, and the letters and the explanations are so skilfully fitted together, that the work forms a complete, homogeneous, and lifelike picture of the poet and his time." Nation, 1898.

- Ward, Mrs May (Alden). Petrarch. 1891.....92 P463w

 "There is very little criticism of Petrarch's works or illustrations of his life from his poems: the volume is thus no more than a biographical sketch of the man himself...[She] derives the material of her portrait mainly from the letters of Petrarch, and her conception of his place in history from Mr. Symonds." Nation, 1891.

"Not a complete record, for they break off at 1820, and the author lived on at Paris until the closing years of the Second Empire...Was a great-granddaughter of Stanislaus Poniatowski...and the grandniece of Stanislaus Augustus, the last king of Poland...The Countess describes a visit to Paris in 1810 very fully; otherwise, the action centres in Poland. Prior to 1806, her family interests were paramount, but when the war of the Third Coalition brought the French to Warsaw, she came in contact with Napoleon and his staff. After the Grand Duchy of Warsaw had crumbled, she witnessed the return of the Russians. The last episode of the volume is the marriage

- of the Grand Duke Constantine...She had the liveliness of the Polish nobles, and she knows how to communicate it to her memoirs." Nation, 1900.
- POTOCKA, Hélène (Massalska), comtesse.
Memoirs of the princesse de Ligne; ed. by Lucien Perey,

Covers the period of her school days at a convent school near Paris, her marriage with Prince Charles de Ligne, and her subsequent life to the time when she became the wife of Count Vincent Potocki. Some doubt has been cast on the genuineness of the countess's journal and the accuracy of M. Perey's supplementary narrative. The popular picture of the "Countess Potocka" by Mme Le Brun, is generally supposed to be a portrait of this countess.

RAMAKRISHNA.

Müller, Max. Rāmākrishna; his life and sayings. 1899...92 R173m

The subject of this biography was an Indian ascetic (1833-86). He was supposed to possess powers of thought-reading, predicting future events, seeing things at a distance, healing disease by simply willing, and the power of changing a man's thought by simply touching his body. He believed that all religions are true, and in explaining this side of his nature the author describes the various religions of India and their expounders. He was looked upon as half God and half man, and his influence among his people was marvelous.

Adams, Henry, b. 1838. John Randolph. 1892. (American statesmen.)92 R188a

The same. 1899. (American statesmen.).....92 R188a

Carefully prepared, though unsympathetic, biography. Of value to the student of political history.

"We already have a larger and more complete life of Randolph, by Hugh A. Garland...The two sketch the Virginian from altogether different standpoints...The ingenuous and unconscious sympathy of Garland, and the evident antipathy of Adams, make them almost biographers of their sections as well as of their subjects." Nation, 1882.

RANJIT SINGH.

Griffin, Sir Lepel Henry. Ranjit Singh. 1892. (Rulers of India.)92 R191g

Ranjit Singh (1780-1839) was an ambitious East Indian prince, called the founder of the Sikh empire. In 1809 he made a treaty with the British, with whom he always maintained peaceful relations.

RAPHAEL.

Duppa, Richard. Michel Angelo by Richard Duppa, with

Raffaello, by Quatremère de Quincy. 1846.....92 M663d

Catalogue of the principal works of Michel Angelo, in sculpture, painting, design and architecture, p.164-188. List of the works of Raffaello, p.452-457.

The life of Michael Angelo was written early in the 19th century under the influence of the English revival of interest in Italian art, particularly that of Michael Angelo. The biography of Raphael, published in 1824, is inaccurate in many respects.

RÉCAMIER, Mme Jeanne Françoise Adélaïde (Bernard).

Memoirs and correspondence; tr. by I. M. Luyster. 1867..r92 R262

The memoir was written by Mme Récamier's adopted daughter, to whom she bequeathed her papers with the understanding that they were to be used for this purpose. The correspondence, though it contains few letters of Mme Récamier's, is very interesting. It consists almost entirely of letters from distinguished people, those of Chateaubriand, for instance, forming a complete autobiography of the last 25 years of his life.

REED, Gen. Joseph.

Bancroft, George. Joseph Reed; a historical essay. 1867..r92 R283b

"Gov. Reed was charged with meditating a treacherous abandonment of the American cause, and a determination to go over to the British, and George Bancroft in his history introduced the statement on what appeared to be reliable testimony. A bitter controversy ensued, in which William B. Reed took part, and it was ultimately shown that he had been confounded with Col. Charles Reed." Appletons' cyclo-pædia of American biography.

Reed, William Bradford. Life and correspondence of

Joseph Reed. 2v. 1847.....r92 R283r

"President Reed was military secretary of Washington, Adjutant-general of the Continental Army, Member of Congress, and President of the Executive Council of the State of Pennsylvania. The confidential relations of the commander-in-chief and his military secretary give to these letters great value...Although there has been some controversy concerning them, their importance is universally conceded. They throw light not only on the Revolutionary, but also on the Constitutional, period." C. K. Adams.

REED, Mary.

Jackson, John, of the Mission to lepers in India and the East.

Mary Reed, missionary to the lepers. [1900.].....r92 R283j

On her return to America in 1890 from India, where she had been for several years a missionary, Miss Reed discovered that she had fallen a victim to leprosy. Realizing that there was no hope of cure, she went back to India to live and work among the lepers. This little book is a record of the good she accomplished.

REEVE, Henry.

Laughton, John Knox. Memoirs of the life and correspondence of Henry Reeve. 2v. 1898.....r92 R287l

English writer (1813-95), editor of the "Edinburgh review."

"His cosmopolitan training, intimacy with the most distinguished men of his time, brilliant social position, acquaintance with the innermost springs of politics, wide literary sympathies, and marked ability as a writer, well fitted him for the post. During the forty years of his sway, the 'Review' bore the impress of his strong individuality." Dictionary of national biography.

"To no more competent source could we look for a lifelike biography of Ernest Renan. Madame Darmesteter knew him intimately in his later years, and became, after her marriage with the eminent scholar James Darmesteter, almost a member of Renan's family circle... The influence exercised on Renan by his sister, his sojourn at the Seminary—every episode of his long, storm-tossed life is of course dealt with, but the very real charm of this small volume of less than 300 pages lies in the writer's insight into Renan's character and personality in his old age... and in her analysis of his various books and opinions." Literature, 1897.

 Bibliography, p.377-390.
 "Loving care and sympathy are evident upon every page, as well as a degree of scrupulousness in the statement of exact fact that verges upon pedantry. We wish that we might go beyond this tribute of respect, and commend the volume as a piece of good writing and adequate criticism; but this is frankly impossible...Nevertheless, the book is welcome, and we could not well dispense with it, although it does little to assist us in comprehension of the rare and beautiful spirit exhaled from these poems that constitute one of the chief glories of our Victorian literature." Dial, 1898.
- ROSSETTI, Dante Gabriel.
 Cary, Elisabeth Luther. The Rossettis; Dante Gabriel and Christina. 1900.....92 R744c
 Dante Gabriel Rossetti, the English artist-poet, is generally recognized as the leader of the preraphaelites. This study of his life and work contains photogravure reproductions of the characteristic paintings of Rossetti, which form the collection of Samuel Bancroft, jr., of Wilmington, Delaware. Two chapters on the life and work of his poet-sister, Christina Rossetti, are added.

 family letters, with a memoir. 2v. 1895.....92 R744r
 The first volume contains the memoir proper, the second consisting entirely of letters.
 "In a sense and to a degree the life of Dante Gabriel Rossetti is the story of the growth and development of English art in his day and generation. Its side lights come from the world of poetry and letters. It is the key to that enigma, the Pre-Raphaelite movement." Literary world, 1896.
- Rossetti, William Michael, ed. Ruskin, Rossetti, pre-

 Confessions, [in English]. 4v. 1897.....92 R777c
 One of the greatest French writers of the 18th century (1712-78).
 "To write memoirs of one's own life was one of the fancies of the time, but like all else, it became in Rousseau's hand something more far-reaching and sincere than a passing fashion. Other people wrote polite histories of their outer lives, amply coloured with romantic decorations. Rousseau with unqualified veracity plunged into the inmost depths, hiding nothing that would be likely to make him either ridiculous or hateful in common opinion, and inventing nothing that could attract much sympathy or much admiration." Morley's Rousseau.

 Præterita; scenes and thoughts in my life. 3v. 1885.....92 R899
 Author, artist and social reformer (1819-1900).
 "The most important work of his last period was the fragment of autobiography, undertaken at the suggestion of his friend, Prof. C. E. Norton, and published at intervals during 1885-9 under the title of 'Præterita'...This book contains occasional passages of description as fine as anything in 'Modern Painters,' and is marked throughout by limpid ease in the narrative, by the keenness of its recollections, and by brilliant character-sketches of friends and acquaintances." Dictionary of national biography.

 Author was for many years Ruskin's private secretary.
 "His book, which, for the rest, is a noble tribute to his own devotion to its subject, and a by no means valueless contribution to the history of a man who will always be an object of great interest in the history of literature, is otherwise simply a labored and almost indiscriminate as well as unintelligent laudation of all Mr. Ruskin has ever done or proposed to do." Nation, 1893.
- Hobson, John Atkinson. John Ruskin, social reformer. 1898.92 R899h Gives a short biography of Mr Ruskin taken from "Præterita," "Fors," and other papers; and a summary of his views on political economy, socialism, machinery and industrial towns, education, and woman's place. The author is himself a social reformer and has written some books on economics.
- La Sizeranne, Robert de. Ruskin and the religion of beauty. 1899.....92 R899l
 "Three essays which first appeared in the 'Revue des Deux Mondes'...  "The book...remains an exposition and not a criticism, a synopsis of Ruskin's teaching rather than an outline of how he is to be studied to the best advantage." Introduction.

- Meynell, Mrs Alice (Thompson). John Ruskin. 1900.
 (Modern English writers.).....92 R899me
 "Method...is to consider successively and briefly Ruskin's principal works, devoting to each book...a special chapter. Each of these chapters sets forth the leading ideas of the work considered, includes a few illustrative extracts, and brings to the discussion a certain element of the author's personal idiosyncrasy. The author is herself a writer of such distinction that this personal note always proves interesting, although it is sometimes irritating, and often excites to protest." Dial, 1900.
- Rossetti, William Michael, ed. Ruskin, Rossetti, pre-Raphaelitism; papers, 1854-1862. 1899.....92 R744ro

 "From the days when Napoleon was changing the map of Europe at his will until the time of our own Civil war, Lord John Russell was in the House of Commons, and prominent from the first; and this splendid service was crowned with five years more of distinguished service as Earl Russell in the Foreign Office and as Prime minister. During this whole career Lord John was the champion of the Whig principles of religious toleration and equality...The cause of parliamentary reform was so peculiarly his own that he was chosen to introduce the great measure of 1832, although not yet of cabinet rank." Dial, 1896.
- RUSSELL, Rachel (Wriothesley), lady.
 Stepney, Catherine (Pollok), lady. Memoirs of Lady Russell and Lady Herbert, 1623-1723. 1898.....92 R917s
 Rachel, lady Russell, was the wife of that Lord Russell who was beheaded in 1683 on a charge of treason. A woman of fine mind she was her husband's adviser and even after his death followed public events with keen interest. Lady Herbert was the wife of Sir Edward Herbert, an adherent of the Stuarts. There is an interesting account of her rescue of her husband after the battle of Naseby and their escape to France.

 Lord Charles Russell (1832-1900) was an eminent English lawyer; from 1894 to the time of his death, lord chief justice of England.
 "This life of a lawyer by a lawyer is a success...A harmony between subject and writer is pleasantly felt all through the book, and is helped by the fact that Mr. O'Brien's biographical intentions were known to Lord Russell, who willingly talked to the purpose." Academy, 1901.
- RUTHERFORD, Samuel. .
 Letters, 1639-1661; ed. by Thomas Smith. 1875.....92 R935
 A Scottish Presbyterian clergyman, theologian and controversialist, professor at Edinburgh university, from which he was banished for two years, 1636-38, on account of his severe Calvinism. He wrote "Lex Rex," which was publicly burned by the authorities, and other works, but is best known from his "Letters," first published in 1664.

- SALA, George Augustus Henry.
 Life and adventures, written by himself. 2v. 1896.....92 S159
 He was a precocious boy and gives many childish reminiscences of distinguished people, mostly musicians and actors. His own life work was chiefly literary. He was editor, contributor, novelist, dramatist, but was principally distinguished as a special correspondent, in which capacity he made many expeditions and was present on many notable occasions.

 Famous sultan of Egypt and Syria (1137-93).
 "There are comparatively few books in English, which deal in a scholarly and trustworthy way with Muslim history and to these Mr. Stanley Lane-Poole has made a welcome addition. The book is based throughout on a sound study of the original sources, and yet the weight of learning is borne lightly, and few lay readers will guess how much solid work has been put into it." Nation, 1899.

 Leaves from [his] autobiography. 1893.....92 S185
 Celebrated Italian tragedian, born in 1829.
 "Tells us of his youth, of his first humble appearance on the stage, of his early successes, of his later triumphs, and of his stellar wanderings. He gives us his impressions, not only of his compatriots, Modena, Rossi, and Ristori, but also of Rachel, Sarah Bernhardt, Coquelin, Mounet-Sully, Edwin Booth, and Henry Irving...The frankness of Signor Salvini's interest in himself is its own excuse; he is right in believing himself so great an actor that what interests him shall interest us also." Nation, 1893.
- SAMUELS, Capt. Samuel.
 From the fore-castle to the cabin. 1887.....92 S193
 "Is a stirring tale of adventure. It is written in a homely, manly language which befits one who has earned distinction by deeds rather than words,—with but little boastfulness, although it relates the speedy promotion of the author in his career on the sea and the honors and fortune he gained through valor and integrity." Dial, 1887.

 Letters; tr. by R. L. de Beaufort. 3v. 1886.....92 S213
 Biographical sketch of George Sand, v.1, p.9-40.
 "Their intrinsic interest, the large additions that they make to the knowledge of their author's character, the varied scenes and the numerous attractive personalities that they bring before us, can neither escape the notice, nor disappoint the expectation, of any competent reader." Athenæum, 1886.
- Lettres d'un voyageur. 1869.....92 S213l
 The first of these, dated 1834, gives the author's impressions of Italy.

- Among the others are letters addressed to Liszt, to Meyerbeer, and others. The "Encyclopædia Britannica" says of them, "They are specially valuable to the student of George Sand, as they give her views of men and things, not refracted and distorted by the exigencies of a novel."
- Caro, Elme Marie. George Sand. 1892. (Great French writers.)92 S213c
 "His running exposition, both of the individual novels and of the Sandian conception of a novel in general, is most adroit and far from inadequate. He has managed with great skill to lay emphasis, without tediously dwelling, on the points in which that conception and its embodiment in words correct the faults of the prevailing school of novels, and he has . . . made great use of that charming correspondence with Flaubert, which exhibits both correspondents so fully and so agreeably." Athenæum, 1888.
- Thomas, Bertha. George Sand. 1883. (Famous women.)92 S213t
 "To a rapid and concise account of outward events and material circumstances are added clear and attractive sketches of the books which best lend themselves to such a résumé, and which are most important as illustrations." Nation, 1883.
- SANDS, Admiral Benjamin Franklin.
 1899.92 S221
 The narrative includes incidents never before told in the lives of Farragut, Porter, Rodgers, Rowan, Ammen, Jenkins and Worden; anecdotes of Generals Grant, French and others; reminiscences of Garibaldi and Dom Pedro I of Brazil; also some account of the revolutions in South America, the slave-trade on the west coast of Africa, the Mexican war, and the War of the rebellion. The work also tells of the origin and growth of the United States coast survey, and of the foundation and nucleus of the United States naval observatory.

 Also published with the title "Souvenirs d'âge mûr."
 Recollections of the popular French dramatic critic and lecturer (1828-99). This volume supplements his "Souvenirs de jeunesse," which embodies his memories of youth.
- Souvenirs de jeunesse. 1895.92 S243
 "M. Sarcey may not be a great writer . . . but what a charming talker he is! There can be no greater pleasure than to read his theatrical feuilleton in the Temps—rambling, disconnected notes, full of personal allusions, remote as possible from any attempt at fine writing, and full of rich hints and the very best independent criticism. In the 'Souvenirs' the same qualities are found. The tone rises, however, but only a little, when he gives graphic details of his academic career, both as a pupil in the École Normale and as an instructor in several provincial faculties." Nation, 1885.

 "References," p.8-9.
 Sarpi (1552-1623) is best known as the historian of the Council of Trent and the adviser of the Signory of Venice in its quarrel with Paul V.
 "It does not contain, apparently, the results of any original research, but recites in somewhat exaggerated style the well-known facts in the career of the remarkable man whom the author characterizes on the title-page as 'the greatest of the Venetians.'" Nation, 1894.
- SARTAIN, John.
 Reminiscences of a very old man, 1808-1897. 1899.92 S249
 "As a boy he was assistant to a maker of fireworks who had charge of the 'effects' at Covent Garden Theatre, and thus came into contact with many of the actors of the day. Later he became an engraver, and, crossing to America in 1830, knew many of the artists of that period, Inman, Sully, Neagle, and others. Still later, as magazine proprietor, he met many of the earlier literary men of America...Mr. Sartain's style is not particularly vivid, and of many of the interesting people he knew he has not much to tell us; but the book is, nevertheless, an entertaining one." Nation, 1899.

Lucas, Herbert. Fra Girolamo Savonarola; a biographical study based on contemporary documents. 1899.....92 S2681

"Bibliographical list," p.11-20.

"This volume had its origin in the fiery controversy which the fourth centenary of Savonarola's death revived. Its first appearance was in the form of articles in the Tablet, representing what may be called the Jesuit point of view, while simultaneously the very divergent view of the Dominicans found expression in a series of papers in the Irish Rosary. Since that time Father Lucas has revised and in great measure rewritten his work...It is most carefully derived from the original sources, which are scattered through numerous periodicals and monographs, not easy for the English reader to obtain." English historical review, 1901.

"Brings together a rich collection of contemporary documentary evidence bearing on the relations of parties, the political and ecclesiastical intrigues, and the correspondence between the magistracy of Florence and the Papal Court at Rome." M'Hardy's Savonarola.

 "We have now the whole correspondence brought together chronologically, the letters being left intact as originally written, and made more valuable by a most complete series of explanatory notes giving references to the papers alluded to, as well as short biographical notices of people mentioned in the correspondence. The care and trouble which has been bestowed upon this most essential adjunct to a set of letters containing references to memoirs which for us represent the scientific literature of a former generation, has thus resulted in a distinct contribution to the history of science, and the editors have laid all workers in the domains of physics and chemistry under a debt of obligation." Nature, 1900.

 "An adequate life of Schubert is yet to be written. All the biographies printed thus far. . . are short, and none equals in literary manner and interest the article by the editor in Grove's Dictionary. The present book is as full as the ordinary biography and has an excellent feature in a chronological catalogue of Schubert's compositions." H. E. Krehbiel.

The period covered is from November 1825 to 1832.

"When Lockhart came to that stage in Sir Walter's career when it was appropriate to make extracts from his 'Journal,' he stated his inability to give them in full owing to there being many references to living persons who might be pained or inconvenienced if these appeared in print...Now that the whole is in print, the new matter seems to be nearly as valuable as that which appears in the 'Life'...The manner in which the 'Journal' has been prepared for publication deserves hearty praise." Athenaeum, 1890.

"Who can reproduce the subtle charm and pathos of Scott's Journal?... It is monotonous, yet it is full of interest; it contains no new information, yet it adds immensely to our knowledge of the man who was, not only in Scotland, but throughout the English-speaking world, the literary monarch of his day." Nation, 1891.

 "The first volume of Mrs. Marshall's ably and graphically written biography closes with the death of Shelley. The second is given to the twenty-nine years of Mary's widowhood, during which she was forced to labor unremittingly with her pen to eke out the scanty sum which Shelley's father, Sir Timothy, reluctantly allowed for the maintenance of his daughter-in-law and grandson." Nation, 1890.

 "The 'new details' of which Mr. Biagi speaks were, we believe, published a few years ago in Harper's Magazine; and the present book consists substantially in a reprint of that article, preceded by a recapitulation of the facts already known concerning the closing days of Shelley. New details... fall into two classes: documents, drawn from the archives of Tuscany and Florence, concerning the discovery of the corpse, and the negotiations of the poet's friends for its possession and disposal; and depositions of the old fishermen and other local persons who witnessed the last scene on the beach at Viareggio." Academy, 1898.

 "He has condensed the old Shelley papers by Hogg, Peacock, Trelawney, Medwin, Hunt, Lady Shelley, Stockdale, and other lesser writers, the correspondence and diaries of Godwin, and the modern investigations of Garnett, Rossetti, Forman, and Shelley students of less note; and he has amplified the biography constructed from these sources by manuscript papers of the Shelley family and others...The work is necessarily henceforth the authority for the facts of Shelley's career. It is in a strict sense a biography. It deals with the events of his life, and touches only incidentally and briefly his works and genius, his contemporaries, and the history of his times." Nation, 1887.

Salt, Henry Stephens. Percy Bysshe Shelley. 1892.....92 S545sa
 "Written from the point of view of intimate sympathy with the poet's doctrines and personal character...The book is both brief and pleasant to read, and leaves a much clearer impression on the mind than Mr. Sharp's book does; and, although it is a less cultured and judicial performance than Mr. Symonds's little volume, it has a more distinct aim and unity, and deserves an equal popularity. Its aim is to depict Shelley as the writer feels he was, and what Mr. Salt feels Shelley was is simply an advanced embodiment of the higher civilization which it should be the aim of man's existence to attain." Athenaeum, 1888.

 "Mr. Sharp has been at pains to give a fair summary of the facts before him, while Mr. Anderson's bibliography, appended to Mr. Sharp's 'Life,' is a useful contribution to the literature of the subject.  "As a book for general reading, Sheridan's Memoirs have attractive features that will insure success. . .  Fitzgerald, Percy. Lives of the Sheridans. 2v. 1886. 92 S552f
 "Seems to hold a brief against the man whose life he is writing. . . Those who have read any of his books will know just what to expect in this last, and they will not be disappointed when they find contradictory inaccuracies, a bustling vivacity, a general slovenliness, and a most interesting subject. . . The most valuable part of Mr. Fitzgerald's volumes is devoted to Mrs. Norton. . . The account of another gifted member of this singularly gifted family, the late Sheridan Le Fanu, the novelist, is also welcome. The few pages given to Sheridan Knowles, the dramatist, are altogether inadequate. Nor is the treatment of 'Tom' Sheridan or of the other children besides Mrs. Norton at all satisfactory." Nation, 1887.

- Oliphant, Mrs Margaret Oliphant (Wilson). Sheridan. [1883.] (English men of letters.) 92 S552o
 "Mrs. Oliphant thinks Sheridan has been overrated. Her sketch of him and his writings appears designed to emphasize this view. . . - Rae, William Fraser. Sheridan; a biography. 2v. 1896. 92 S552r
 "Mr. Rae has told the romantic and diversified story of Sheridan's career well and temperately. . . His book at once takes its place as the standard one on the subject—the one in which the real Sheridan, as contradistinguished from the half-mythical Sheridan of previous memoirs, is portrayed with all attainable clearness. To release this brilliant and singularly winning and humane figure from the region of largely calumnious fiction was a worthy task; and Mr. Rae has done it. . . satisfactorily." Dial, 1896.

 "By a stroke of good fortune, the author of the 'School for Scandal' has at last found a friendly biographer. . . Watkins was a political opponent; Moore was a trifler who betrayed his hero; Prof. Smyth was another traitor. . . and Mrs. Oliphant combined the acme of incompetence with the utmost carelessness. . . Mr. Sanders is not blind to Sheridan's very obvious faults, and he makes no attempt to gloss over his many failings. He has gone to the sources for his facts, although he is able to add but little to the discoveries of earlier investigators, except possibly in his fuller use of more recent political biographies to illustrate Sheridan's public life." Nation, 1891.

SHERMAN, John.

Recollections of forty years. 2v. 1895.....92 S553I

The same. 2v. 1895.....r92 S553I

"Ends with the convening of Congress, Dec. 1894. It is a very frank self-revelation. The long public career of the author-subject (began 1854) and especially his identification with the financial history of the U. S. during and since the Civil War, make his book a history of American politics for the period. It is, however, the work of a strong party man, and is also written largely from recollections without sufficient verifications. The book is unequal, the interest continuous. It may also be especially consulted for the political history of Ohio. Though written entertainingly, it makes no effort at literary finish." Larned's Literature of American history.

The later edition contains an additional chapter on General Sherman's last years, death and funeral.

"The free use he makes of his letters, orders, and reports gives a very great interest and value to his book. He is never dull, and he contrives to break up and enliven even the accounts of the movements of troops so that the attention never seriously flags...His memoirs close with the great review in Washington, but he appends a concluding chapter on the military lessons of the war, which is full of knowledge, wisdom, and sound sense." Atlantic monthly, 1875.

SHERMAN, Gen. William Tecumseh, & John.

Sherman letters. 1894.....92 S553s

"These letters of two brothers to each other cover a period from 1837 to 1891...Not only an interesting illustration of the constant affection of two strong and famous men, widely different in character, but add many lines to the portraiture of contemporary character. They also assist in the proper interpretation of critical events of the Civil War period. General Sherman's letters are particularly frank and energetically express his antagonism to politicians and political methods." Larned's Literature of American history.

SHERMAN, Gen. William Tecumseh.

Bowman, Samuel M. & Irwin, R. B. Sherman and his campaigns; a military biography. 1865.....92 S553b

"Although among the earliest of the lives of Sherman, this was among the most authentic. It was written by officers who served with Sherman, and were given access to his papers. They also had the coöperation of leading generals and others who had part in the events narrated. The book is well and clearly written, but is of course subject to the drawback that the Official records were not then available, and many important topics were not fully understood. It was, however, a leading authority till Sherman published his own memoirs ten years later." Larned's Literature of American history.

 "Mr. Fox Bourne's claim to write about Sidney is well established. His 'original 'Memoir of Sir Philip Sidney' is among the best things of its kind. Critics have rejoiced...to throw it in the teeth of succeeding commentators, and, in a word, the first serious rival of Mr. Fox Bourne A. D. '62 is Mr. Fox Bourne A. D. '92. The thirty years have perhaps shed as much light on the period of Sidney as on any other in literature. And the light has so shone on Mr. Bourne that he tells his story afresh, disowning...certain hot errors of his youthful blood... In a marked degree he succeeds in picturing to us the possibilities of noble boyhood and manhood in Elizabethan days. Smetham (1821-89) was an English artist and essayist.
"Smetham's familiar letters...possess a high...interest. They are to a certain extent prepared compositions, owing to his habit of noting down his thoughts for future use, but this does not interfere with their ease and freshness. Written from a full heart on the wide range of subjects which interested him, they have the first qualification of good letter-writing—vitality." Dictionary of national biography.

Eminent political economist (1723-90).

"The value of Mr. Haldane's volume lies in its being a clear and popular exposition of the doctrines in The Wealth of Nations., and of the effect of these doctrines on the political and mercantile history of the world." Spectator, 1887.

"It is hastily assumed in some quarters that Adam Smith as an economic thinker has become antiquated. This book is the outcome of a desire, long entertained, to show the vitality of the principles which underlie Smith's great work, and to trace their relation to the fruitful generalisations associated with the Evolution theory." Preface.

Rae, John, b. 1845. Life of Adam Smith. 1895.....92 S642r

"Upon the whole, we think that Mr. Rae has performed a difficult task with a good degree of success. He cannot be said to have reanimated his subject, and brought him before us as a living and speaking man. The outlines of the portrait are faint and the colors are dim. But students of economics and of the art of government will be glad to have all the relics of their great teacher collected and arranged with the respectful care shown by Mr. Rae." Nation, 1895.

SMITH, Mrs Elizabeth (Grant).

Memoirs of a Highland lady, 1797-1830; ed. by Lady

Strachey. 1898.....92 S646

Written to interest the children and nieces of the author in the scenes of her early life.

"In its way the chronicle is a very intimate one, for it tells the whole inner history of a respectably important family, tells it, too, with no omissions of darker scenes, till one is fairly forced into a lively interest in the whole kin. We hear of the early days in Lincoln's Inn Fields and of the holidays at watering places; then of the long years in the

- Highlands, varied with seasons in Edinburgh...The style is without art, but direct, vivid, and at times fired with genuine emotion." Academy, 1898.

Autobiography of Sir Harry Smith, baronet of Aliwal on the Suttlej; ed. with supplementary chapters of G. C. M. Smith. 2v. 1902.....92 S649
Bibliography, v.1, p.19.
"It is characteristic of Sir Harry Smith that he wrote the greater part of his autobiography in two months. Nearly six hundred pages, alive with energy, were 'scrawled over by him at full gallop' between August 11th, 1844, and October 15th...Few men ever saw wider or harder service. Africa knew him, and India. At Aliwal he won perhaps his chiefest triumph, and in South Africa he has left at Aliwal North, at Harrismith, and at Ladysmith the memory of his achievements...Harry Smith ranks among the happiest men that ever lived. But the book is not only happy; it is packed with military wisdom...and all soldiers may study it with profit." Spectator, 1901.

English clergyman, wit and essayist (1771-1845).
"The main facts of Sydney Smith's life were so clearly and gracefully set forth, and his character was in most of its aspects so fully illustrated, by Lady Holland and Mrs. Austin in the 'Life and Letters' which appeared some twenty years ago, that it was not possible for Mr. Reid to do more than gather up stray details from outside sources of information, published and unpublished, and avail himself of the opportunity afforded him of extracting from the family documents such items as it had not been thought desirable to print during the lifetime of persons to whom they partly referred. There was room for much profitable gleaning, however...and Mr. Reid has produced an interesting and useful book." Athenæum, 1884.

 "Much as we may sympathize with our author's motive, we cannot but very closely question the sources of his information; there is at least, as he allows, something 'very curious' in this Diary of the repudiated Princess...The doubts which we have hinted as to the genuineness of the dramatic diary, are corroborated by its internal evidence." Athenaeum, 1845.

- Stevens, Abel. Madame de Staël; a study of her life and times, the first revolution and the first empire. 2v. 1881.92 S778s
"Dr. Stevens has consulted almost everything available, and has digested the whole into a narrative which is sufficiently readable, accompanying it with criticisms of the work as well as of the life of his subject. Both as a biographer and as a critic he is far too laudatory. His reiterated statement that Madame de Staël is the first of women authors is almost ludicrously exaggerated." Athenaeum, 1881.

"Political partisanship runs too high in Bulgaria for the truth easily to be made known, and the author of the present book frankly tells us that he writes from the point of view of the friends of the murdered minister. Nevertheless, he is fair enough...It comes out clearly that Prince Alexander was merely a handsome puppet, and that the whole credit for his military successes must be ascribed to Stambuloff. On the other hand, the reckless violence of Stambuloff is clearly established even by a friendly pen." Athenaeum, 1895.

 English scholar and divine (1815-81).
 "Dean Stanley's biographer has tried rather a dangerous experiment in publishing a sort of supplement to the 'Life and Letters.' It inevitably covers much the same ground as the earlier work...On the whole, however, the correspondence, if judged on its own merits, seems quite worth giving to the world. It is also the case that whereas the biography dealt, for the most part, with Dean Stanley the theologian, the present collection throws fresh and interesting light on that far more fascinating being Dean Stanley the man." Athenæum, 1895.
- Bradley, George Granville. Recollections of Arthur Penrhyn Stanley. 1883.....92 S787b
 "Within the compass of a hundred and fifty pages Dr. Bradley has contrived to give an animated and interesting account of his lamented predecessor in the Deanery of Westminster...He lays just emphasis on Stanley's courtesy, his unflinching charity, his noble courage, his eagerness to see what is good in the opinions of those from whom he differed, his hatred of oppression and sympathy with the oppressed. The style is sometimes too rhetorical, but in popular lectures such a fault is excusable." Athenæum, 1883.

 Although this work contains a sketch of Stanton's early life, his professional career and his general characteristics, its main purpose is to present the record of his relation to the Civil war, and to mark the place in history to which his services to the country entitled him. His public life embraced the secession winter of 1860-61, three years of the Civil war—1862-65, and three years of the reconstruction struggle which followed. - Dobson, Austin. Richard Steele. 1886. (English worthies.) 92 S814d
 "Macaulay's sinister dislike and Thackeray's warm affection have created a Steele for us; and, different as their judgments are, the divergence springs rather from their temperaments than from their conceptions of the culprit's career. Mr. Dobson suggests. . . that the flings of the one and the condonements of the other of the two great literary portrait painters are too much in one tone of color. For himself, he has tried, though against tremendous rhetorical odds, to give us only a natural picture." Nation, 1886.

 "In Mr. Montgomery we recognize much industry, with a want of power to grapple with his subject. . . Although he has nothing new to say of Steele, he might have put together in one volume all that is important, of what has been said of, or by, 'poor Dick,' and he might at least have drawn some new inferences from old evidence, the bearing of which has escaped the observation of other writers. But Mr. Montgomery had a pair of panniers to fill, and he has cared for nothing but the filling of them." Athenæum, 1865.

Sterling (1806-44) was an English author, a personal friend of Carlyle.

"Carlyle wished to exhibit him as raised above the turbid sphere of contemporary controversy. The result was a book so calm, tender, and affectionate as to be in singular contrast with his recent utterances and to be perhaps his most successful piece of literary work." Dictionary of national biography.

"What Carlyle with wonderful art has done is to...lead us to believe that we are reading a life of Sterling, while Sterling is really 'vanished' and we are actually reading an extraordinarily interesting history of the places that he lived in, the men he knew...and the personality of his redoubtable and admirable friend and biographer, all thrown up on a background of the shortcomings of church and state of England in the 19th century." Saintsbury's Essays in English literature.

He never fails of the thing that we most love letters for, the full expression of the moment and the mood...the thing in his head, his heart or his house...The ego does, magnificently, shine—which is much the best thing that, in any correspondence, it can ever do... The impression, for the reader of the later letters, is...one of singular beauty—of deepening talent, of happier and richer expression, and, above all, of a sort of ironic, desperate gallantry, burning away, with a finer and finer fire, in a strange, alien air." Henry James, in North American review, 1900.

- Vailima letters; being correspondence addressed to Sidney Colvin. 2v. 1895.92 S848v2
The same. 1896.92 S848v
 These letters extending from Nov. 1890 to Oct. 1894, were written to Mr Sidney Colvin with the idea of giving him and Mr Stevenson's other friends in England full and regular account of his life in the new world in which his health obliged him to live. Begun without a thought of publication, he put into them so much of his life and thought that finally, in June 1892, it occurred to him that "some kind of a book" might be made of them after his death, and upon this suggestion Mr Colvin has acted; but after, as before, that date there is not the slightest suggestion in Mr Stevenson's manner that he was writing for an audience of more than one. The interest of these letters is manifold. Unconsciously they reveal the author's personality, they tell of his thoughts, his interests, his pleasures in his South sea home, and, by no means least, they contain a full record of his literary work during this period.

"They unite the exotic interest of a book of travels with the record of a literary life, and in both these phases present the self-painted portrait of a man of genius, who for a brief space exercised a larger personal sway than any other literary worker of his generation." Nation, 1896.

"Sympathetic it is undoubtedly, and it possesses the negative virtue of avoiding that conscientious malevolence which...has decried the life and work of Edgar Poe. But here its merits end. The writer knew Stevenson in his early Edinburgh days, but she throws practically no new light of any value on that period." Athenaeum, 1898.

Contents: His heritage.—His ancestry.—Outline of his life.—The moralist.—The artist.—The romantic.—The novelist.—The limner of landscape.—His style.—Epilogue.
No attempt is made to give new biographical details. It is rather an essay toward a "just appreciation of Stevenson's personality and temperament as shown in his finished achievement."

"It is in the spirit of semi-idolatry which the brave spirit and wayward charm of Stevenson the man roused in many who knew him, that this book is written...In spite of all this, it gives a pleasant notion of Stevenson's parents, his nurse, to whom his life-long devotion was most creditable, and himself." Nation, 1899.

- STILLMAN, William James.
Autobiography of a journalist. 2v. 1901.....92 S857
Appeared in an abridged form in the "Atlantic monthly," v.85, 1900.
"Mr. Stillman's account of his early ventures in journalism...in political conspiracy (he became associated with Kossuth in 1852 and went to Europe on a secret mission for him), in 'roughing it' in the Adirondack wilderness, is followed by the charming episode of the 'Adirondack Club'—one of the richest chapters in the book... Mr. Stillman was consul at Rome in the early sixties, and... deals very frankly with the then moral and political condition of the papal city... Second volume is devoted mainly to his consular experiences in Crete, and his adventures in the Balkan countries and the Levant... as foreign correspondent of the 'Times' and other newspapers... Eastern questions, and Greek and Italian politics and politicians are interestingly discussed." Dial, 1901.

STOBO, Maj. Robert.

Memoirs of Maj. Robert Stobo of the Virginia regiment;
[ed. by N. B. Craig]. 1854.....92 S863

The same. 1854.....92 S863

Stobo was one of the hostages confined in Fort Duquesne after the surrender of Fort Necessity, and furnished to the Americans a plan of the fort and a scheme for its reduction. When this was discovered by the French, he was closely confined in Quebec, but finally escaped. This edition is from a manuscript copy of the rare first edition in the British museum, with notes and a facsimile of Stobo's plan of Fort Duquesne.

 Poole, Stanley Lane-. Life of Lord Stratford de Redcliffe. 1890.92 S898p
 Lord Stratford de Redcliffe (1786-1880) was eminent in the English diplomatic service during his long public career, but his most distinguished and valuable service was at Constantinople, where he was minister at different times from 1810 to 1858.
 Condensed from the edition in two volumes published in 1888, chiefly by the omission of the longer dispatches and memoranda.
 "Never before, or since, has a Christian exercised such a sway or held such a place as he did in the Moslem Empire, and his iron rule, as it is [here] described...leaves a powerful impression of his strength, resolution, sagacity, and lofty conception of his duties." Spectator, 1888.

- Lang, Andrew. Pickle the spy; or, The incognito of Prince Charles. 1897.....92 S929l
 The subject of the book is the mysterious disappearance of Prince Charles from 1749 to 1766. Author seeks to identify Pickle the spy

- with Alastair Ruadh Macdonnell of Glengarry.
 "It is of supreme importance as dealing a fatal blow—and one driven home with great ability and Voltairean decision—to British belief in the Young Pretender, and the nobility of the Jacobite chiefs." Spectator, 1897.
- Lang, Andrew. Prince Charles Edward. 1900.....qr92 S929l
 "Mr. Lang has never been more happily inspired than in this study of the...last conspicuous Prince of an ill-fated house, and the centre of a movement which he did not understand [Jacobitism]. He has invested the whole narrative, splendid and sordid, with an unreal, fairy tale atmosphere, which is the true one." Spectator, 1900.
 The make-up of the book is unusually good, with many portraits.

 "Useful and well-written account of the life of Stuyvesant and of the history of New Netherland during the last twenty years of its existence. The book also contains, in an introductory chapter, a sketch of the origin of the province and of its progress previous to the beginning of Stuyvesant's administration...One chapter contains a compact and valuable account of the topography and social condition of New Amsterdam just before the English conquests." Larned's Literature of American history.

 Sketch of the well-known composer of "The Mikado" and "Pinafore."
 "Put together by Mr. Arthur Lawrence, but with much aid, apparently, from Sir Arthur himself—in fact, the volume is a notable specimen of what may be called 'biography by interview.'" Academy, 1899.
- SUMNER, Charles.
 Dawes, Anna Laurens. Charles Sumner. 1892. (Makers of America.).....92 S956d
 Somewhat unsympathetic, but carefully prepared and admirably written.
 "Interesting and well written book devoted chiefly to the public career of Sumner, but giving a good portrayal of his personal and social characteristics...The author is strongly in sympathy with the anti-slavery cause but does not indulge in indiscriminate praise of Sumner." Larned's Literature of American history.
- Pierce, Edward Lillie. Memoir and letters of Charles Sumner. v.1-2. 1877.....r92 S956p
 "For the rise of the slavery issue, the legislation of the period of Civil War and Reconstruction, and the history of the foreign relations of the United States from 1861 to 1871, this work is almost indispensable. Mr. Pierce was a lifelong friend of Sumner, and has edited his letters with the greatest care. The accompanying memoir is remarkably fair and judicious. The first two volumes are more important for the intellectual and social history of New England than for national history." Larned's Literature of American history.
- Storey, Moorfield. Charles Sumner. 1900. (American statesmen.)92 S956s

The same. 1900. (American statesmen.) r92 S956s

"There was, in truth, no chance for Mr. Storey to display originality in research...but there was a rare opportunity to rearrange the topics and the colors and to analyze Sumner's impressive character. The opportunity has been improved to a considerable degree, but...the book lacks vivacity and a literary touch." Nation, 1900.

SUNDERLAND, Dorothy Sidney, countess of.

Cartwright, Julia Mary, afterward Mrs Ady. Sacharissa; some account of Dorothy Sidney, countess of Sunderland, her family and friends, 1617-1684. 1893. r92 S958c

The subject of this biography is the beautiful Dorothy Sidney immortalized by the poet Waller and the artist Van Dyck, and of whom Steele wrote in the Tatler, "The fine women nowadays are at best but pretty girls to me who have seen Sacharissa, when all the world repeated the poems she inspired." She was the daughter of Robert, earl of Leicester, the sister of Algernon Sidney and of Henry Sidney, earl of Romney, while the famous George Savile (Lord Halifax) was her son-in-law. Her life was a meeting point of so many distinguished men and women and was so identified with the society and politics of her time that it serves well as the centre of a narrative like this.

SWIFT, Jonathan, dean.

Unpublished letters; ed. by G. B. Hill. 1899. r92 S977

The same. 1899. r92 S977

These letters were written between 1714 and 1731 to an Anglo-Irish squire, Knightley Chetwode, and are mostly occupied with Chetwode's own private affairs, though they settle one or two doubtful points concerning Swift's work. Dr Hill's notes are all helpful to readers unacquainted with Swift, and some of his information is not elsewhere accessible. Illustrated.

Craik, Sir Henry. Life of Jonathan Swift. 2v. 1894. r92 S977c

"The first attempt in our own times to give to the public a finished biography of the satirist [1667-1745] who exercised such strange power over his contemporaries...The biographer evidently writes with a strong sympathy for his subject, but he rarely allows himself to become a mere partisan...It is to be regretted that his style is somewhat monotonous and wanting in vivacity...But the work shows much industry and research, and in some instances the author has been fortunate enough to gain access to documents which have hitherto been either unknown or overlooked." Athenæum, 1883.

Stephen, Sir Leslie. Swift. [1882.] (English men of letters.) r92 S977s

"Perhaps, too much space is devoted, in this brief biography, to the part played by Swift as a politician; and yet we scarcely like to hint at a fault in this direction, for nowhere have we met with an account of Swift's public career so concise and so comprehensive. That the little volume should be entirely satisfactory to the student of the period is impossible, for Mr. Stephen has been forced to write, as it were, in shorthand, but the general reader will gain all that he is likely to ask for from this admirably-written narrative." Spectator, 1882.

SWING, David.

 Sydenham (1624-89) was an eminent English physician and the great reformer of practical medicine.
 "The fullest biography yet written [1900] of this famous seventeenth-century physician." Academy, 1900.

SYMONDS, John Addington.

- Brown, Horatio Robert Forbes. John Addington Symonds; a biography compiled from his papers and correspondence. 2v. 1895.92 S988b
 "One who of all the men of our generation best knew, loved, and understood the Italian genius in literature." Frederic Harrison.
 "Symonds was one of the most lovable of men: brave in his outlook, courageous in the face of adverse and often disastrous circumstances, youthfully enthusiastic. . .generous, a nature of sweet human sunshine . . .He was a scholar in the best sense of the word: a man of catholic culture. There has, in our time, been no mind more sensitive to beauty." William Sharp, in Academy, 1895.
 Mr Brown, whom Mr Symonds asked to be his literary executor, has very wisely supplemented Mr Symonds's autobiography by many letters and extracts from diaries and note books, and has been unusually successful in putting these together into a consecutive narrative.

 These memoirs of the celebrated French statesman and diplomat (1754-1838) according to his directions were first published 50 years after his death.
 "The most experienced and sagacious of men discourses about certain selected events that concerned him, and passes sentence on two generations of contemporaries. . .Nothing could increase the lustre of the talents which he is known. . .to have displayed. . .but we are made to know him better; and all that he says and much that he conceals brings into vivid light one of the wonders of modern politics." Lord Acton, in Nineteenth century, 1891.

 Bibliography of Taylor's works, p.299-307.
 "Mr. Smyth has drawn his materials for this book mainly from the full biography of Taylor which was made soon after his death by his wife and Mr. Horace E. Scudder. . .The. . .letters. . .are quoted freely. . . and the writer has availed himself of Mrs. Taylor's manuscript collections and of the letters and reminiscences of many friends. . .Mr. Smyth has spent more of his strength upon the man's personality and the circumstances of his wide experience than on the criticism of his work." Nation, 1896.
 Taylor, Mrs Marie (Hansen), & Scudder, H. E. Life and letters of Bayard Taylor. 2v. 1885.92 T251t
 The story of the life of the well-known author and traveler (1825-78) is told largely in his letters.
 "The work has been done not only with affection, but with judgment and good taste. The result is a finished and accurate picture of a most attractive subject." Atlantic monthly, 1880.

TAYLOR, Sir Henry.

- Autobiography, 1800-1875. 2v. 1885.92 T253
 Sir Henry Taylor is perhaps best known as the author of the drama,

- "Philip Van Artevelde," but he also wrote other plays, was a warm friend of Southey and well known to many leading men of letters.

The duchess of Teck (1833-97) knew all the important royal personages and distinguished people of her time. She was a woman widely loved for her good deeds. Her diary, kept with more or less regularity since 1853, is quoted from at great length.
- TEMPLE, Dorothy (Osborne), lady.
Letters to Sir William Temple, 1652-54; ed. by E. A. Parry. 1888.92 T283f
"Dorothy's letters tell the story of this old-time courtship from its commencement to its happy termination, and reveal to us the singularly noble and attractive personality of Lady Temple...The letters are written in a very agreeable style, and show the courtly negotiator of the 'Triple alliance' in a pleasanter light than that in which we have heretofore seen him." Dial, 1889.

Cary, Elisabeth Luther. Tennyson; his homes, his friends and his work. 1898.....92 T295c
To the outline of the chief incidents in the life of the poet, the author has added critical estimates of his work, taken both from English and foreign sources.
- Horton, Robert Forman. Alfred Tennyson; a saintly life. 1900.92 T295h
"We do not think that it is judicious to attempt any change in the established connotation of the word 'saint.' So much we feel bound to say, but we have no fault to find with the general tone and temper of Dr. Horton's book. It is a very able criticism of the poet's life and work, and sets forth appreciatively, but without exaggeration, his great service to human faith and morals." Spectator, 1900.
- Lang, Andrew. Alfred Tennyson. 1901. (Modern English writers.).....92 T295f
The material for the biography is taken from the life of the poet by his son, but that part is very short, and the chief value of the work lies in its impartial, yet sympathetic criticism of the poetry.
- Rawnsley, Hardwicke Drummond. Memories of the Tennysons. 1900.....92 T295r
"The Rawnsleys for two generations were born and bred in the region where Tennyson received his first impressions, among the scenes so often celebrated in his poems...There are...chapters...on the poet's funeral, on 'Virgil and Tennyson,' and on Charles Tennyson Turner... The sixteen illustrations are mostly unfamiliar, and add to the interest of the book." Nation, 1901.

- Tennyson, Hallam, lord. Alfred, lord Tennyson; a memoir. 2v. 1897.....92 T295t
 "He enables us to look behind the curtain, to see the artist at work, and it is this which raises the biography to a rank in the first order of such writing...It is a record, so full as perhaps has never before been given to the world, of the growth and progress of the mind of a great imaginative artist." Edmund Gosse, in North American review, 1897.
- Waugh, Arthur. Alfred, lord Tennyson; a study of his life and work. 1896.....92 T295w
 "It is scholarly and unhysterical; the narrative part is a remarkably full and careful cento taken from the journals, memoirs and correspondence of the age, arranged in excellent taste, and the criticism, if sometimes a little...timid, is sound and wholesome...A valuable feature of Mr. Waugh's book is the prominence it gives to a consideration of the plays." Saturday review, 1892.

- THACKERAY, William Makepeace.
 Collection of letters of Thackeray, 1847-1855. 1889.....92 T333
 Nearly all of these letters were written by Thackeray to his friends the Brookfields.
 "The collection covers eight years of Thackeray's mature life. It is composed of every-day notes, written from the club or his lodgings about the things of the hour; or of longer letters of travel, sent from some watering-place on the continent, or some country retreat in England, or from Paris...They are for the most part entirely personal, and describe what happened to himself, or confide the moods that visited him; and, too, they are especially the letters of a novelist,—the world that he sees is the very same that he writes about." Atlantic monthly, 1887.

 "Scissors and paste have very literally achieved all that scissors and paste can achieve...It may be conceded...that Mr. Melville has produced a most readable and amusing book...but...to the higher qualifications of the biographer he has no pretention...No good biography was ever produced by a mere compiler." Saturday review, 1899.
- Merivale, Herman, & Marzials, Sir F. T. Life of W. M. Thackeray. 1891. (Great writers.).....92 T333m

 Begun by Merivale, who was a personal friend of Thackeray, but who had to give up the work on account of ill health, the biography was continued by Marzials. The result is not altogether happy, although there are some excellent descriptions of the novelist and an interesting chapter on Thackeray's friendships.

 "In the faith that she was a woman of radiant nature, they [the editors] have shown her almost exclusively from the side of her affections. Incidentally, of course, the reader gets glimpses of her relation to wider interests in the world of thought and action, but for the most part the narrative is one of the affectionate duties and interests of Celia Thaxter as wife, mother, daughter, and friend." Nation, 1895.

THOMA, Hans. See Artists, p.1265.

THOMAS à BECKET, St.

Abbott, Edwin Abbott. St. Thomas of Canterbury; his death and miracles. 2v. 1898. .92 T3731a
"The work falls into two parts. In the first, Dr. Abbott compares, incident by incident, the various narratives of the martyrdom given by St. Thomas's biographers...with the object not merely of ascertaining the facts, but also of determining the relative value, as a witness, of each...and of establishing the causes on which that value depends...The second part...deals with the miracles wrought upon believers in the martyr, which began immediately upon his death." Academy, 1898.
Milman, Henry Hart. Life of Thomas à Becket. 1860. .92 T3731m
"The biography here presented has been taken from Dean Milman's great history of Latin Christianity." Preface.
Thompson, Robert Anchor. Thomas Becket; martyr, patriot. 1889. .92 T3731t
Mr Thompson seeks to prove that Thomas à Becket did not seek ecclesiastical privileges to gratify personal ambition, but in order to better resist the tyranny of the English crown.

THOMAS AQUINAS, St.

Vaughan, Roger William Bede, abp. Life and labours of Saint Thomas of Aquin; abridged and ed. by Jerome Vaughan. 1890. .92 T3732v Eminent scholastic teacher of the 13th century. He was the author of numerous works, theological, moral and metaphysical.
"The best account of the life of St. Thomas Aquinas and his times it has been our good fortune to peruse in English or in any other language." Athenaum, 1872.

THOMAS, Gen. George Henry.

Coppée, Henry. General Thomas. 1893. (Great commanders.) .92 T373c
American general (1816-70), who won distinction in the Mexican war and later in the Civil war, on the Union side.
"He has found it easy to eulogize his hero without vilifying others... The author's characterizations of Gen. Thomas are happy, both in the development of the man in the earlier chapters, and in the summary near the end of the book. The military preëminence which is attributed to him over all his contemporaries will not be accepted as the final verdict." Nation, 1894.

Van Horne, Thomas Budd. Life of General George H.

Thomas. 1882.....92 T373v

"The author has probably injured General Thomas, rather than honored him, by his ill-advised attempt to clear him of the charge of slowness at Nashville...He has not carefully analyzed the situation, but has gathered a formidable number of criticisms and suspicions and has failed to refute them. Instead...he has contented himself with sweeping assertions, with condemning the military plans of every officer to whom Thomas was subordinate, and with depreciating the services of other commanders." Larned's Literature of American history.

Harley, Lewis Reifsneider. Life of Charles Thomson, secretary of the Continental congress and translator of the Bible from the Greek. 1900.....92 T387zh

Bibliography, p.215-235.

An enlargement of a short monograph originally prepared for the Historical society of Montgomery county (Pa.). Thomson was elected secretary of the Continental congress in 1774 and retained the position till 1789. He had great influence, and was called "the soul of that political body." His translation of the Bible contained the first English version of the Septuagint that had been published at that time and was considered a great credit to American scholarship.

ston, pastor and painter; a memoir, with a catalogue of his paintings and a critical review of his works. 1895..qr92 T387b

Thomson was a minister of the Church of Scotland and a pioneer in Scottish landscape art. This biography has been gleaned from contemporary literature, the personal reminiscences of relatives and old parishioners, and the church records of presbytery and parish. Numerous photogravure reproductions of his paintings are included.

THOMSON, Joseph.

Thomson, James Baird. Joseph Thomson, African explorer. 1896.....92 T387t

"Joseph Thomson ranks next to Livingstone and Stanley among African travellers, not merely because of the magnitude and importance of his explorations, or of his extraordinary capacity as a leader, but also because of his singularly wise treatment of the natives." Nation, 1897.

Familiar letters; ed. by F. B. Sanborn. 1896.....92 T395

The same. 1896.....r92 T395

"Includes apparently all the letters in Emerson's edition of 1865...Mr. Sanborn's additional matter is of two kinds—letters of Thoreau's not hitherto published in a book, and a good deal of editorial matter, rich in personal recollection and the fruit of much research...Moreover,

- Mr. Sanborn has made good his purpose in undertaking a new collection, namely, to show Thoreau in a less aloof and stoical aspect than Emerson deliberately singled out." Nation, 1894.

- "Mr. Channing's self-revelation is not the least valuable part of it. His thought and style are often wilfully eccentric and obscure, but there is more than enough of excellent matter, original and quoted, to condone every fault. Nothing else written about Thoreau comes so close to his life and mind as this delightful and exasperating incoherency." Nation, 1902.

Sergyeenko, P. A. How Count L. N. Tolstoy lives and works; tr. fr. the Russian by I. F. Hapgood. 1899.92 T588s

The Russian authorities forbade any demonstration on the occasion of Count Tolstoy's 70th anniversary. The only public notice of the event was the appearance of these desultory descriptions of Tolstoy's daily life. The writer first met the great Russian author in 1892, but has come into very intimate relations with him. Many items of interest are told about the vegetarian life led by Tolstoy and his eldest daughter, and the more conventional life of Countess Tolstoy and her other children.

- TOURZEL, Louise Elizabeth Félicité (de Croy d'Havre), marquise de.
Memoirs. 2v. 1886.....92 T653
The duchess de Tourzel, who was governess to the children of Louis XVI from 1789 to 1795, draws a vivid picture of the life of the royal family of France through the most stirring scenes of the revolution. The most important events are narrated in full detail, and with this narrative we have a history of the time.

A narrative based partly upon Trelawny's life and partly drawn from his imagination. Trelawny (1792-1881) was an Englishman, the friend of Byron and Shelley; he fought with the former in Greece, and wrote one of the most widely read volumes about these famous men, "Records of Shelley, Byron, and the author."
- TROLLOPE, Anthony.
Autobiography. 1883.....92 T761
"It will not be so much my intention to speak of the little details of my private life, as of what I, and perhaps others round me, have done in literature; of my failures and successes such as they have been, and their causes; and of the opening which a literary career offers to men and women for the earning of their bread." Author.

Trumbull was governor of Connecticut, 1769-83.
"This work, though marred by serious defects, is possessed of many merits. It is based on reliable data, consisting of information furnished by papers, memoirs, and the like...Though flattering to Trumbull, it is not excessively so, and it is the only biography that has been written of a man whose career deserves greater recognition...The material, valuable and important as much of it is, is neither well sifted nor well arranged." Larned's Literature of American history.

 Note upon Turgot's works, p.7-8.
 Noted French statesman and financier (1727-81).
 "In default of the possibility of lively narrative he has, very excusably, diverged a little into accounts of other political economists of Turgot's day, and his book is thus a treatise in little on those questions...which agitated France so much in the middle of the eighteenth century."

 Works consulted, p.18-19.
 In 1700, after the death of Charles II of Spain, the grandson of Louis XIV of France was called to the Spanish throne under the title of Philip V. He was but 17 years old, and his queen, Maria Louise of Savoy, but 13. The youth of the couple rendered it necessary that they should have a friend and adviser, and the princess des Ursins, a Frenchwoman of noble birth and of great tact and intelligence, was chosen for this position, though nominally the camarera-mayor, or superintendent of the queen's household. For 12 years during the turmoil and chaos of the wars of the Spanish succession her power was almost absolute. Her life was full of contrasts and is of unusual interest.

- Ford, Worthington Chauncey. George Washington. 2v.
1900.qr92 W272fo
"Mr. Ford's careful and conscientious edition of Washington's letters, and the studies which it involved, have given him special qualifications for...[this] work...Avoiding all temptations to superfluous comment or panegyric, and austere rejecting unnecessary details, he keeps the reader's eye from first to last fixed upon Washington himself, the events of whose life are narrated with a simplicity and sobriety that bring the man before us as he lived. In the portion of the narrative which deals with the military operations of the Revolution, this rigid self-restraint on the part of the biographer is especially noticeable, only so much being told as enables us to understand the position, acts, and motives of the Commander-in-Chief." Nation, 1900.

"Deals mainly with the life of Washington down to his election as President, the years subsequent to 1789 being but briefly surveyed. In general plan and method of treatment the work suggests the 'true biographies'...There is the same copious quotation from letters and journals, the same interesting emphasis upon details, and the same distinctly personal impression as in the well-known biographies by Ford, Curtis, and Fisher...The result is a presentation of Washington on his human side which, while at times somewhat painful to hero-worshippers, happily avoids the belittling manner into which this style of biography easily falls." Nation, 1902.

Hare, Augustus John Cuthbert. Story of two noble lives; being memorials of Charlotte, countess Canning and Louisa, marchioness of Waterford. 3v. 1893.....92 C173h
"The work begins in the third quarter of the eighteenth century...Lady Hardwicke and Lady Stuart de Rothesay, the grandmother and mother of the two beautiful women designated by the title, contribute two...collections of prefatory letters. Lady Hardwicke's husband was Lord Lieutenant of Ireland from 1801 to 1806, and she gives some amusing sketches of Dublin society of that time. Lady Stuart de Rothesay's letters are dated from the English Embassy at Paris, and are rich in reminiscences of men and events...Her daughters, Lady Canning and Lady Waterford, belonged to the second quarter of the century. Mr. Hare gives interesting details of their childhood in France and England and of their marriages. Lady Canning's married life was spent in India during the eventful period of the mutiny, her journal being full of the thrilling scenes there enacted...Lady Waterford spent her long widowhood among her husband's tenants in Ireland. With many domestic details are anecdotes and recollections of some famous people."

Lights and shadows of a long episcopate; reminiscences and recollections. 1900.....92 W624

"Ordained in 1849, and ten years afterwards he was elected Bishop of Minnesota. This brought him into direct relation with what has been the great work of his life, the evangelisation of the Red Indian race and the support of their rights in regard to the Government of the United States. This is naturally the great subject of his book; on other matters he has from time to time something interesting to say, but this is the thing that manifestly fills his heart." Spectator, 1900.

WHISTLER, James Abbott McNeill.

Eden versus Whistler, the baronet & the butterfly; a valentine with a verdict. 1899.....92 W626e

The same. 1899.....r92 W626e

The artist Whistler is his own hero. Commissioned by Sir William Eden to paint a portrait of his wife, he quarreled with his patron concerning the amount of the check sent him (no regular contract having been made) and refused to deliver the portrait. The matter went into the French courts, a verdict being rendered. This is a satirical history of the affair, all the letters and documents in the case being given.

A witty and whimsical record, mainly in the form of letters which Whistler himself wrote to various newspapers, of his frequent controversies on the subject of art.

WHITE, Gilbert.

White, Rashleigh Holt-. Life and letters of Gilbert White of Selborne. 2v. 1901.....92 W633w

"That White's 'Selborne' is the only work on natural history which has attained the rank of an English classic is admitted by general acclamation, as well as by competent critics...White was a prince among observers, nearly always observing the right thing in the right way, and placing before us in a few words the living being he observed." Dictionary of national biography.

The biography is largely made up of extracts from the naturalist's diaries, his letters, and his friends' letters to him. It serves as an admirable supplement to the "Natural history," call number, 591.942 W63.

This work was undertaken with Whittier's approval and published during his lifetime.

WHITTINGTON, Sir Richard.

Besant, Sir Walter, & Rice, James. Sir Richard Whittington, lord mayor of London. 1881. (Makers of history.)92 W6612b

Whittington (d. 1423) was an English merchant whose fame is probably due largely to the popular legend of Whittington and his cat.

"The first serious attempt to ascertain and bring together the facts of Whittington's life was made by Samuel Lysons...but the value of his work is marred by his acceptance of the legend as genuine biography...The life by...Besant and...Rice adds a few details from the City Archives, but adheres to Lysons's uncritical standpoint, and is little more than an expansion of his work without his references and documents." Dictionary of national biography.

WILBERFORCE, William.

Wilberforce, Samuel, bp. Life of William Wilberforce, revised and condensed from the original edition. 1868..92 W697w

The edition from which this is condensed is chiefly a series of letters and private journals and is (1900) the chief authority on the subject. For 20 years Wilberforce was the leader in and out of Parliament in the movement for the abolition of the slave-trade, and no one was more instrumental in bringing it about.

"One most obvious characteristic of Wilberforce was [his] singular personal attractiveness...His transparent kindness and simplicity made him, like Fox, lovable even to his antagonists...Though some injudicious admirers tried to raise his merits by depreciating the claims of his allies and predecessors in the anti-slavery movement, it may safely be said that there are few heroes of philanthropy whose careers will better stand an impartial investigation." Dictionary of national biography.

WILKES, John, 1727-97.

Fitzgerald, Percy. Life and times of John Wilkes. 2v.

1888.92 W725f

Comprehensive view of the times is lacking, but the author gives minute details in regard to the life of Wilkes, who was a leading figure in the politics of the reign of George III.

WILKIE, Sir David.

Cunningham, Allan. Life of Sir David Wilkie. 3v. 1843..92 W726c

Wilkie (1785-1841) was a Scottish painter.

Byng and S. M. Stephens. [1892.]....92 W728

WILKINSON, Gen. James.

Memoirs of my own times. 3v. 1816.....r92 W731

General Wilkinson was implicated in Burr's conspiracy, and was court-martialed in 1811, but acquitted. He failed as commander in the operations against Canada in the War of 1812; was acquitted by a court of inquiry in 1815; but was discharged from the service.

"A very tedious book, but one which is necessary to the student from its array of documents. v.1, chap.13-16 treats of the Northern campaigns, and v.3 is wholly devoted to the Wilkinson court-martial." Winsor's Narrative and critical history of America.

Clark, Daniel. Proofs of the corruption of James Wilkinson and of his connexion with Aaron Burr. 1809.....r92 W731c

"Clark strives to prove that Wilkinson was a pensioner of Spain from 1794 to 1803; and an accomplice of Burr in treasonably plotting a separation of the states...The accompanying documents...give information about Jefferson's administration of the West." Larned's Literature of American history.

WILLARD, Frances Elizabeth.

Glimpses of fifty years. 1889.....92 W733

Voluminous and put together without literary skill, but an interesting record of an active life. The greater part of the book is naturally concerned with the author's labors in the temperance cause and as the advocate of woman's rights.

Gordon, Anna A. Frances E. Willard; a memorial volume.

1898.92 W733g

Binder's title reads "Beautiful life of Frances E. Willard."

Author was for 21 years Miss Willard's private secretary.

WILLARD, Mary.

The same. 1901.....92 W741a

Freeman, Edward Augustus. William the Conqueror.

1894. (Twelve English statesmen.).....92 W741f

Gives in concise form, much that is contained in his exhaustive "History of the Norman conquest," concerning the king whom Freeman regards as chief among the makers of England.

WILLIAM I, emperor of Germany.

Forbes, Archibald. William of Germany; a succinct biography of William I. 1888.....92 W7415f

Mr Forbes accompanied the emperor as war correspondent, from the Rhine provinces to Paris during the Franco-German war. The sketch is almost entirely confined to the emperor's military career.

WILLIAM II, emperor of Germany.

Frederic, Harold. The young emperor William II of Germany; a study in character development on a throne.

1892.92 W741if

"From the literary point of view, a well-constructed and uncommonly well-written book. As a contribution to history it is worthless. The material is simple gossip." Nation, 1891.

Leudet, Maurice. The emperor of Germany at home.

1898.92 W741ile

Minute details in regard to the private life of the emperor and the administration of his household. Very fully illustrated.

Lowe, Charles. The German emperor William II. [1895.]

(Public men of to-day.).....92 W741il

Describes the first seven years of his reign. Although the author is very evidently an admirer of the emperor he does not hesitate to criticize him.

- Müller, Karl. Unser kaiser; ein lebens- und herrscherbild. 1899.92 W7411m Brief popular biography (32 pages) of William II, emperor of Germany.
- WILLIAM III, king of England.
Traill, Henry Duff. William the Third. 1892. (Twelve English statesmen.)92 W7412t
"The various questions requiring treatment are handled throughout... with a perfect absence of prejudice... The general narrative is also good, and though Mr. Traill does not pretend to deal with military matters with any extreme minuteness, his handling of them is judicious and thorough." Saturday review, 1888.
- WILLIAM IV, king of England.
Fitzgerald, Percy. Life and times of William IV, including a view of social life and manners during his reign. 2v. 1884.92 W7414f
Not a history of political events except of such as the king was closely connected with, but of these there are detailed accounts. The author has taken from memoirs of the period many dramatic scenes and sketches connected with famous personages of the period.
Huish, Robert. History of the life and reign of William IV, including political portraits.92 W7414h
"Of very slender authority being for the most part... gossip and scandal." Dictionary of national biography.
- WILLIAM of ORANGE, called the Silent.
Harrison, Frederic. William the Silent. 1897. (Foreign statesmen.)92 W7413h
"Mr. Harrison has told a clear story of the life of the founder of the Dutch Republic... giving a distinct picture of the very complicated political situation which existed at the epoch of the revolt of the Netherlands... More discriminating in his judgments than Mr. Motley and somewhat less unstinted in his admiration of his hero, Mr. Harrison still gives substantially the same picture of the Dutch statesman as that given by the American historian... Especial value is added to the little volume by complete biographical tables." Critic, 1898.
Putnam, Ruth. William the Silent, prince of Orange. 2v. 1895.92 W7413p
"Miss Putnam's William of Orange is essentially identical in qualities with that of Motley, but the figure is more sober, its shortcomings more freely acknowledged, its growth to the greatness of its ultimate attainment more distinctly emphasized." Nation, 1895.
- WILLIAMS, Roger.
Straus, Oscar Solomon. Roger Williams, the pioneer of religious liberty. 1894.92 W748s
Based on contemporaneous documents; judicial in spirit, yet showing unconcealed admiration for the hero.

- (American men of letters.)92 W755b
 Bibliography, p.353-356.
 "It is saying a good deal for Mr. Beers when we add that he has produced...a readable and almost valuable book of memoirs...He has utterly failed to prove—if indeed he ever expected to prove it—that Willis's life was in itself worth writing; but he has shown it amply worth considering as a chapter in American literature." Nation, 1885.

 Lawyer, statesman and author (1772-1834). From 1817 to 1829 he was United States attorney-general.
 "Valuable for history of the practice of the law rather than of statesmanship. Concerns early Virginia politics, the cabinets of Monroe, Adams and Jackson, but especially the bar of the Supreme Court from 1814 to 1834. Also the rise of the Anti-Masonic party. Especially full on the trial of Aaron Burr." Larned's Literature of American history.

 Virtually the political history of Holland from 1652 to 1672.
- WOFFINGTON, Mrs Margaret.
 Molloy, Joseph Fitzgerald. Life and adventures of Peg Woffington. 1887.....92 W832m
 There is little reliable material for a biography of Peg Woffington, and after using that little, and the often merely casual allusions to her in biographies, letters and journals of the period, the author has filled up his volume with sketches of the men and women who surrounded her, and of the life of the time.
- WOLF, Joseph.
 Palmer, Alfred Herbert. Life of Joseph Wolf, animal painter. 1895.....92 W836p

Includes a detailed study of the pictures of the noted Prussian painter, with many examples.

WOLFE, Gen. James.

- Bradley, Arthur Granville. Wolfe. 1895. (English men of action.).....92 W837b
 "An eminently readable book. The material for a biography of Wolfe is scanty...If we have now little that is new, the old story is retold with vigor and grace." American historical review, 1896.

WOLKENSTEIN, Oswald von.

- Villari, Mme Linda (White). Oswald von Wolkenstein, the last minnesinger of Tirol. 1901.....92 W842v
 "Authorities consulted," p.5.
 Johannes Schrott, critic and biographer, who has made an excellent modernized selection from Oswald's works, says, "No poet of the Middle Ages, Walter von der Vogelweide excepted, had so wide a range of thought as Oswald von Wolkenstein."
 Mme Villari's biography is followed by translations of a few of his typical poems.

 "In writing this 'Life' the author had little more to do than collect the various fragmentary notices that exist in other books, and reduce them to a narrative, with illustrations from the heroine's own works; and this has been done with thoroughness and patience." Nation, 1885.

WOLSEY, Thomas, cardinal.

- Creighton, Mandell. Cardinal Wolsey. 1895. (Twelve English statesmen.).....92 W848c
 "Of all English statesmen there is perhaps none of whose character and career it is so difficult to form a just estimate as Cardinal Wolsey...Mr. Creighton has succeeded in explaining the inconsistencies and perplexities in Wolsey's career and helping us to a correct standard of judgment." Nation, 1888.

WOOLMAN, John.

- Journal.92 W876
The same, with an introduction by J. G. Whittier. 1871....92 W876j
 Woolman (1720-72) was an American Quaker preacher who spent the greater part of his life in journeying from place to place. The journal is more a record of his inner life than of his outward wanderings.

WORDSWORTH, Dorothy.

- Journals; ed. by William Knight. 2v. 1897.....92 W897i
 Includes journals written at Alfoxden and Grasmere, 1798-1803, and of the Scottish and continental journeys made by Wordsworth and his sister. Her exquisite descriptions of Grasmere and its district are interesting in themselves and cast a flood of light on the circumstances under which her brother's poems were composed, while some of her descriptions were incorporated by Wordsworth in his prose works.
 "Renews and deepens our knowledge of one of the most beautiful relationships in all literature." Academy, 1897.

WORDSWORTH, William.

- Legouis, Émile. Early life of William Wordsworth, 1770-1798; a study of "The prelude." 1897.....92 W897l
 "A singularly interesting study of Wordsworth's youth. Of M. Legouis's general qualifications, it need only be said that he has a thorough knowledge of English literature, and a minute acquaintance with all the special literature bearing on Wordsworth's early career...Wordsworth was in France at the crisis of the revolution, and there, as we know from 'the Prelude,' became the enthusiastic admirer of Michel Beaupuy...M. Legouis...has now pointed out the nature of his influ- ence upon his young English disciple." Leslie Stephen's Studies of a biographer.

It has a geographical glossary of forts,

Indian villages and other settlements mentioned in it." Larned's Literature of American history.

ZELTER, Karl Friedrich.

Goethe, Johann Wolfgang von. Letters to Zelter, with extracts from those of Zelter to Goethe. 1887.....r92 G559g

Zelter was a Berlin musician, the teacher of Mendelssohn, "the restorer of Bach to the Germans." He set many of Goethe's songs to music, was one of his most devoted admirers and from these letters, which cover the widest range of topics, it is evident that Goethe had a real affection for him.

ZOLA, Émile.

MacDonald, Arthur. Émile Zola; a study of his personality.

1898.r92 Z75m

Reprinted from the "Open court," v.12, Aug. 1898.

Scientific study of the man, arranged under such headings as antecedents, mental evolution, general physical characteristics, anthropological examination, psychophysical examination.

Sherard, Robert Harborough. Émile Zola. 1893.....92 Z75s

Combines a biographical study with a criticism of his writings.

Vizetelly, Ernest Alfred. With Zola in England; a story of exile. 1899.....92 Z75v

Account of the author's brief exile in England after the publication of his letter "J'accuse," in which the methods employed in the Dreyfus trial were denounced.

ZURBRIGGEN, Mattias.

From the Alps to the Andes; the autobiography of a mountain

guide. 1899.....92 Z88

"Mr. Zurbriggen is, by common consent, the finest exploring guide the world has yet produced. Born in 1856, in the heart of the high Alps, it was not till 1880 that...he determined to devote his life to the mastery of the great mountains. Since then he has made conquest after conquest...Not only in his own Switzerland, but in the Himalayas, in New Zealand, and in the Andes...Will be attractive to many as the first attempt of any guide to give an account of himself and his doings in print, and as containing a record of mountain-adventure that few climbers...could match." Academy, 1900.

ZWINGLI, Huldreich.

Jackson, Samuel Macauley. Huldreich Zwingli, the reformer of German Switzerland, 1484-1531. 1901. (Heroes of the reformation.)

.....92 Z96j

"Aids to the study of Zwingli," p.21-26. Contains an historical survey of Switzerland before the reformation, by J. M. Vincent, and a chapter on Zwingli's theology, by F. H. Foster.

"First adequate life of Zwingli by an English-speaking author. It portrays the man, the accomplished scholar, the social reformer, the ardent patriot, the theologian...and exhibits the defects of Zwingli with an unsparing hand...[His] theology, philosophy, and ethics are treated in a supplementary chapter." Outlook, 1901.
